

GOVERNOR CITES PENCE LAW CURE

OHIO TARGET OF ALASKAN COLD WAVE

MEMBERS OF FAMILY INSIST MRS. RUTH FOUL PLAY VICTIM

New Probe Started;
Sluggish Crushed By Tragedy.

WATER TOWN, Mass., Jan. 15.—Members of the family of Mrs. George Herman "Babe" Ruth, wife of the famous baseball player, still suspected foul play today in her tragic death by fire in her secret retreat at Dr. Edward M. Kinder's home.

Discovery of two bottles of drug store whiskey, one empty, on the first floor of the house led to the theory that Mrs. Ruth was either in a stupor or had been poisoned so that she was unable to help herself when smoke filled her bedroom, and died from suffocation. They pointed out that the hallway nearby was free of smoke and that the fact that she did not seek safety there, indicated that she was beyond helping herself.

To set at rest their suspicions, despite the West Newton medical examiner's preliminary finding of accidental death, another examination of the body was ordered and the examiner's report was anticipated soon.

Meantime, "Babe" Ruth, baseball hero, was crushed beneath the weight of tragedy in his wife's death with its subsequent uncovering of skeletons in the family closet. Dr. Kinder, who pictured himself as befriending Mrs. Ruth, had admitted to police he was not married to the woman, whom he called, after her death, his wife.

Ruth, a dutiful figure in contrast to the strapping jolly batsman the public loves, begged of the press not to play him with questions. "Please let my wife alone," he almost sobbed, "let her stay dead."

Facing questioners, he had pleaded he was in a "terrible fix" and added he didn't know "what it was all about."

Fumbling with a paper, he told of marrying in Elliptical City, Md., in 1914, the pretty waitress, Helen Woodford from whom he later separated.

The questioners also wanted to know something of his daughter, Dorothy, but he asked to be excused. The question of whether the girl was adopted had been raised as an afterthought to the discovery that Mrs. Ruth, quitting Ruth several years ago, had made her home at times with the prosperous young Back Bay dentist.

Suggestions of the dead woman, that Ruth had recently sought a divorce with a view to marrying a New York woman, were met by Babe's lawyer with a denial.

Chief of Police John Millmore told the United Press after questioning Kinder that the latter was in no way connected with the woman's death.

AMHERST BANK TO BE PROBED

ELYRIA, Jan. 15.—The Lorain County grand jury will investigate the affairs of the Amherst Savings and Banking Co., it was learned today.

W. J. Skehan, state bank examiner, who is conducting an audit of the bank with A. C. Krug, assistant state liquidating officer, said that he would appear before the grand jury Thursday in connection with the closing of the institution on Dec. 19.

While Skehan declares that it is impossible to state at present whether the bank will go through the process of liquidation, he did say that preparations for such a procedure are being made.

The bank closed its doors following a two-day run after the suicide of Jacob Baus, vice president.

FIRST REPUBLICAN SINCE 1923 BEGINS TERM AS GOVERNOR

Cooper Regime As Chief
Executive Now Under Way

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 15.—Governor Meyer Y. Cooper, first Republican to serve as Ohio's chief executive since 1923, took over the reins of the state government today.

The administration technically was turned over to Gov. Cooper immediately after he took the oath of office yesterday, but actually took marked the beginning of his regime.

The governor's new cabinet members likewise took over their jobs today, assuming control of departments which Democrats have headed during the three terms Governor Vic Donahey held office.

Only two departments, education and public control, Education Director John L. Clifton and Public Works Director Richard T. Wisda, both occupying constitutional offices, hold over under the new administration.

Eight cabinet appointees of the new governor were confirmed by the senate following the inauguration and thereafter, so there would be no delay in their taking office today.

Adjt. Gen. Arthur W. Reynolds, new head of the national guard, likewise took over his new duties, surrendered by Frank D. Henderson, who was adjutant general under Donahey.

Gov. Cooper, after resting from a strenuous round of functions was to present his first legislative message to the general assembly this afternoon, advising the law-makers of his legislative program and recommendations.

The governor was to read his message in person before a joint session of the senate and house, scheduled for 2 o'clock p. m.

YOUTHFUL WIFE IS HELD IN SLAYING

MERIDEN, Conn., Jan. 15.—Because she allegedly stabbed her husband to death with a bread knife after he slapped her face during a quarrel, Mrs. Eleanor Forster, 17, was held today on a charge of manslaughter.

Fred Forster, 21, the husband, died of the stab wounds at a hospital here yesterday.

GENERAL BOOTH REPLIES TO DEMAND TO RESIGN ARMY POST

SUNBURY-ON-THAMES, England, Jan. 15.—General W. Bramwell Booth, fighting from his sickbed to retain his position as supreme head of the Salvation Army, replied today to the demand of the Army's high council that he resign.

The aged general's letter answering his critics, including his sister, Commander Evangeline Booth, who feel that he is no longer physically able to guide the Army, was delivered to the high council by his wife.

The council, which had waited an hour for Mrs. Booth to arrive, adjourned to consider the general's reply.

The nature of the general's answer was not disclosed, but it was understood to be a refusal to accept the demand of the high council, denying its authority.

POSSES SEEK APACHE INDIANS AFTER RAIDS UPON RANCHERS

DOUGLAS, Ariz., Jan. 15.—Two newly organized posses of ranchers joined Francisco Pimbre's party of hunters today in search for an outlaw band of Apache Indians whose frequent raids and kidnappings have terrorized border ranches for nearly two years.

Pimbre's group of twelve veteran hunters which set out January 3 to avenge the murder of Pimbre's wife and the kidnapping of his small son, was augmented by two posses of Doming, New Mexico cattlemen seeking Van Phillips, missing Caretas ranch cowboy, who is believed to have been kidnapped by the Apaches.

The three searching parties are advancing in different directions, attempting to surround the Indians, among the ragged crags of the Sierra Mountains.

Phillips disappeared a week ago after leaving the Caretas ranch, eighty miles south of Hachita, N. M., to search for stray cattle. Apache Indians were reported in the vicinity of Caretas ranch on the same day.

MARSHAL FOCH CONTINUES IN SERIOUS CONDITION IS SAID

PARIS, Jan. 15.—Marshal Ferdinand Foch, who is gravely ill at his home here, passed an extremely agitated night, and was unable to sleep, Dr. Heitzboyer, one of his physicians, announced today.

The marshal was able to take light nourishment early this morning, however.

"I must be very reserved in my opinion, but I am quite optimistic now. I have some hope," Dr. Heitzboyer said. "We will continue the light nourishment tonight. The patient is able to absorb it."

The physician spent the night at Marshal Foch's bedside with Mme. Foch and her two daughters, Mme. Recourt and Mme. Fournier.

DRAFT BULLETIN
Dr. Davenier, another of the six heart specialists called in consultation on the marshal, arrived at the Foch home, near the Hotel Des Invalides, early today and conferred with Dr. Heitzboyer. Together they drafted the morning bulletin, for publication at 10 a. m. It read:

"There is a slight diminution in the symptoms. The condition of the heart and kidneys at present shows a slight amelioration." (Signed) "HEITZBOYER, DAVENIERE."

A member of the Marshal Foch's household told the United Press that the Marshal had four crises of suffocation during the night when he lay extremely prostrated and sleepless.

FOPE WILL BECOME SOVEREIGN OF STATE

ROME, Jan. 15.—An agreement whereby the pope will become nominal sovereign over a territory embracing between 11,000 and 15,000 people is reliably reported in diplomatic circles to have been reached between the Vatican and the Italian government.

The agreement now awaits only the pope's approval and announcement. The Italian government would reimburse the Vatican for property confiscated in 1870 according to the agreement, and would give him a small state, which would be virtually independent, although Italian civil authorities would retain civil administration.

The United Press reported exclusively on Jan. 3 that an agreement had been reached between the Vatican and the Italian government for settlement of the Roman question.

DIRIGIBLE BACK AT
LAKEHURST HANGAR

LAKEHURST, N. J., Jan. 15.—The navy dirigible Los Angeles arrived at its hangar early today from St. Joseph's Bay, near Apalachicola, Fla., after an extended training flight down the Atlantic coast.

Lieut. Commander Charles E. Rosendahl reported the giant craft had encountered good flying conditions on the return journey and had been aided by tail winds on the last 1,000 miles, enabling the crew to make a speed of 115 miles an hour.

ZERO TEMPERATURE DUE SOON; SNOW HITS STATE

Traffic Impeded As Rising Mercury Brings First
Heavy Snow; Many Perish From Fires;
Suffering Is Reported

A cold wave sweeping down from Alaska is due to hit Ohio, West Virginia and Kentucky tonight, the U. S. Weather Bureau announced today.

The wave will carry temperatures down to zero and possibly four below in some areas particularly the Great Lakes region, the bureau said.

Yesterday was the coldest day on record thus far this winter but the mercury began ascending last night, affording welcome relief.

The rise brought heavy snows, however, and traffic generally was delayed or halted.

More than four inches of snow fell in central Ohio, while the lakes area reported heavy drifts.

Several deaths, indirectly due to the frigid wave, were reported today. Most of the victims died in fires caused by overheated stoves.

One man was burned to death in Cleveland and another met a similar fate in Youngstown.

Transmission companies were encountering considerable trouble. They reported wires down in several sections, particularly in the hill regions where the cold snapped circuits.

Suffering was general today and charitable agencies were busy caring for indigents.

MARY GARDEN
HURT IN OPERA

CHICAGO, Jan. 15.—A painful injury, which Mary Garden, opera star, received during a performance here Sunday, was revealed by physicians today.

Miss Garden suffered a wrenched back when she was thrown over the shoulder of Virgilio Lazzari, baritone, in a scene of "The Love of Three Kings."

It was learned she stifled her cries until she was carried behind the wings, and that she refused to allow news of her injury to be made public.

The injury was not serious, her physician said.

FIVE AIR VICTIMS
REST IN ARLINGTON

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—Five victims of the army air corps plane crash at Royalton, Pa., in which eight men died last week will be buried in Arlington National Cemetery today while army planes soar overhead.

Symbolical of the occasion, four planes from Bolling Field, home station of the wrecked ship, will cruise above Arlington in what is technically known as a five-ship formation, the place of the fifth ship being left vacant as if awaiting the arrival of the plane destroyed at Royalton.

The five funerals will be separate. The first funeral will be for Samuel P. Jones. The others to be buried are Staff Sergeants Henry Cronan and Rudolph Le Hotta, Master Sergeant Joseph P. McCarthy and Second Lieutenant Harry R. Angell, pilot.

MEXICO PRESIDENT
SAVES WOMAN'S LIFE

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 15.—The president of Mexico was credited today with having saved a woman from drowning.

President Emilio Portes Gil was walking beside a swimming pond at Cuatla Morelos yesterday, a short while before he was to return after a week end there, a dispatch to the newspaper La Prensa said.

He heard a woman screaming for help and leaping into the water, he pulled her to safety.

The woman was Mrs. Pedro Laguna, wife of a wealthy Cuatla broker.

"MOTHER" OTT DIES;
WAS LEGISLATOR

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Jan. 15.—Mahoning County's first woman representative in the state legislature, Mrs. C. J. Ott, 53, died in a hospital here last night following a long illness.

She was elected to the state legislature in three successive terms. During the past summer she came out for the state senate but she became ill in August and was unable to carry on a campaign.

Among the things that won her legions of friends was her stand against the compulsory Bible reading bill which eventually went down to defeat.

During the war Mrs. Ott was active in Red Cross work and became widely known to hundreds of soldiers as "Mother" Ott during her leadership of the railroad canteens.

TAXI DRIVER DIES
RESULT OF ATTACK

TOLEDO, O., Jan. 15.—N. W. Dufoe, 40, a taxi cab driver, who was slugged and robbed by a passenger Friday night, is dead from a fractured skull.

Dufoe told police a youth entered his cab at the downtown station and asked to be driven to a certain address. When they arrived, Dufoe said, the youth slugged and robbed him.

Three days rioting at the institution was put down with the aid of Philadelphia police using riot sticks and tear gas.

EVOLUTION AGAIN

Tennessee has been stirred by another evolution case. Professor Elmore Gentry, principal of Fentress County high school, near Jamestown, Tenn., has issued a denial of a charge placed against him by the fathers of two expelled boys, of being responsible for the "glaring" of books in the school library, which, if taught, would violate the state anti-evolution act. He also has denied teaching subject's proscribed in the state act. Professor Gentry is shown with Mrs. Gentry.

COLUMBUS SETTLES DOWN AFTER COOPER INAUGURATION ENDS

More Wing Collars At Reception Than Since
Before War

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 15.—Columbus settled down to normal routine today, the perished tinsels of the first Republican inaugural ceremony in eight years, blotted by the first real snow of the year.

The milkmen were calling it a day when the last of the committee members waded home at the end of the celebration early this morning.

The closing event, the press smoker, was attended by public officials, local merchants, professional and business men and political workers. It closed, officially, at midnight.

The evening's events were marked by both rising temperature and enthusiasm. The statehouse was packed with citizens in evening clothes for the formal reception, the next-to-last event of the day, attended by the new governor.

Veteran political observers said there hadn't been so many wing collars under the rotunda since before the war.

An even greater crowd attended the public reception during the afternoon. Mr. Cooper signed in the receiving line for more than two hours, shaking hands with thirty persons a minute.

The bitter cold failed to discourage crowds who waited their turn in wind swept Broad St.

The state's military forces formed the bulk of the procession which moved past Governor Cooper following the inaugural ceremonies.

GILDA DIVORCED
FROM ERRING GIL

WAUKESHA, Wis., Jan. 15.—Gilda Grey, the shimmy queen, obtained a divorce from Gil Boag in Waukesha Circuit Court yesterday.

The famous screen actress took the stand and virtually unaided convinced Judge C. M. Tabson that Boag had been guilty of cruel and inhuman treatment of her and that she was entitled to a divorce from him.

Gilda told the court that since her marriage to Boag January 24, 1924 she had supported him. He was an ungrateful drunkard, she declared, and at the same time maintained that since their marriage she "had been true to Gil."

LOVE DENIED; CHOOSES DEATH
Society Woman Turns To Suicide When Mother
Forbids Marriage

SPOKANE, Wash., Jan. 15.—Miss Ruth McDonald, wealthy 34-year-old society woman, chose to die rather than defy her mother who refused to recognize her except as a child, police said today.

Miss McDonald's body, richly clad, was found Sunday night in the rear of her expensive automobile near the Bowl and Pitcher Rapids of the Spokane River. Apparently she had committed suicide by inhaling the fumes of the car's exhaust.

In a handbag, found near her body, were several letters, in which Miss McDonald revealed her unhappy life and the motive for her act.

After a life torment under the domineering spell of her mother, Miss McDonald believed she at last had found salvation in the love of Leonid Fink, prominent Russian artist and photographer of Seattle, letters revealed, but her mother forbade the marriage.

The girl rebelled. She turned over $150,000 in securities to her lover as a safeguard against any action her mother might take. Then her courage failed her.

The spirit of dutiful submission had extinguished the tiny flame of revolt in her heart. She wrote a farewell note to her mother and took the road to the Bowl and Pitcher.

REPEATS CAMPAIGN PLEDGES IN SPEECH TO JOINT SESSION

Economy Without Parsimony Urged In State Affairs

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 15.—Repledging himself to his campaign promises of last fall, Governor Myers Y. Cooper outlined the policy of the administration to the legislature this afternoon.

The senate and house met in joint session in the house chamber at 2 p. m. to hear the first message of the newly-inaugurated executive.

Conceding a constant increase in the cost of running the state, Governor Cooper urged the most strict economy in appropriations measures. He advised snatching proposed legislation in which the cost was disproportionate to the benefits derived.

"I do not advocate parsimony in government," the governor said. "Constructive economy, however, is an entirely different matter."

Gov. Cooper pointed out that Ohio faced a deficit of $13,250,000 in 1926 and that the "Red Ink" was erased by enforcement of the six-tenths mill levy on all property in the state. As this source of revenue will be cut off, (and Cooper does not favor a re-enactment) appropriations must be made accordingly, he said.

"An undue burden," was the governor's characterization of the

EARLHAM COLLEGE PRESIDENT HURT

RICHMOND, Ind., Jan. 15.—David M. Edwards, president of Earlham college, and his wife, Bessie Edwards, are in a hospital at Seymour, Ind., suffering from injuries received in an automobile accident.

Mr. Edwards' condition is critical and that of his wife is reported to be serious.

Dr. Edwards was returning by motor from Chattanooga, where he had attended a convention of college presidents, and was accompanied by Mrs. Edwards, when the accident occurred. At a point sixteen miles south of Seymour last night the Edwards car skidded in the icy road and struck a tree, the force of the impact being sufficient enough to wreck the machine.

Mr. Edwards received several fractured ribs, a broken jawbone, and other injuries. Attending physicians stated it to be possible that his lungs were crushed.

Today X-ray pictures to ascertain the exact extent of his injuries, which it is feared, may prove fatal.

Mrs. Edwards' right arm was broken near the shoulder and her left wrist was fractured. She suffered greatly from shock.

GRISWOLD IS GIVEN
JETT CASE RECORDS

MARIETTA, O., Jan. 15.—Complete record of the case of Hamilton Jett, 17, who died of pneumonia last Wednesday after alleged mistreatment at the Lancaster Industrial School, was forwarded today to State Welfare Director Hal H. Griswold.

The record includes the story of the boy's mother, Mrs. Flora Jett, who was with her son for a week before his death; the result of the examination of the body by three local physicians, and the testimony of Fred Silas Dixon, Marietta undertaker, regarding their conversation with Frank Smith, Lancaster undertaker.

Immediate action in the case has been promised Prosecutor Fred C. Myers.

Representative O. S. Creighton, Washington County, expected to confer with Griswold today relative to the inquiry.

CONVICT AND GIRL
ACCUSED OF MURDER

ZANESVILLE, O., Jan. 15.—County authorities today were preparing for the arraignment of Harold Smith, state penitentiary convict, and Thelma Bonifant, 25, who were indicted late yesterday in connection with the murder of W. S. Walbrown, a mine guard, last Sept. 10.

Walbrown was from Ravenswood, W. Va. His bullet-riddled body was found in a thicket near the home of Charles White of Norval Park. The killing, police said they believed, climaxed a party at White's home.

Smith, who is now serving a sentence for carrying concealed weapons, Miss Bonifant and two men known only as "Chuck" and "Reddie" were present at the party. The last named men were indicted last fall.

COLLEGE GRADS ARE WILLING TO START CAREER AT BOTTOM

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Jan. 15.—The idea that the average college graduate expects to step out into the world with a $10,000 or even a $5,000 a year job seems to be out of date, according to a survey made at the Carnegie Institute of Technology.

That a large majority of college men are reconciled to the idea of a small beginning, was indicated in the report which showed that one-third of last year's graduates of the institute are taking business training courses ranging from three months to two years duration with the companies of their choice.

As such, the graduates are being trained in accordance with the principles and practices of their employers to better fit them for opportunities later as junior executives. The salaries, furthermore, are far removed from $5,000 or $10,000 a year.

According to John D. Beatty, secretary of the Bureau of Recommendations at Carnegie Tech 5,772 placements with total earnings of $770,580 were found by the bureau for students and graduates of the school during the past year. Of this number, 374 were full-time positions, with yearly earnings of $662,262.50.

Sales work provided the most numerous openings for Carnegie Tech graduates during the year, the report showed.

Sixty-nine of the women graduates of the school during the year were placed in positions by the bureau. Their total earnings were $112,092. The positions included, dietitians, demonstrators, interior decorators, scientific assistants, secretaries, social workers and teachers.

"Light a Lucky and you'll never miss sweets that make you fat"

Constance Talmadge.

Constance Talmadge, Charming Motion Picture Star

INSTEAD of eating between meals... instead of fattening sweets... beautiful women keep youthful slenderness these days by smoking Luckies. The smartest and loveliest women of the modern stage take this means of keeping slender... when others nibble fattening sweets, they light a Lucky!

Lucky Strike is a delightful blend of the world's finest tobaccos. These tobaccos are toasted—a costly extra process which develops and improves the flavor. That's why Luckies are a delightful alternative for fattening sweets. That's why there's real health in Lucky Strike. That's why folks say: "It's good to smoke Luckies."

For years this has been no secret to those men who keep fit and trim. They know that Luckies steady their nerves and do not harm their physical condition. They know that Lucky Strike is the favorite cigarette of many prominent athletes, who must keep in good shape. They respect the opinions of 20,679 physicians who maintain that Luckies are less irritating to the throat than other cigarettes.

A reasonable proportion of sugar in the diet is recommended, but the authorities are overwhelming that too many fattening sweets are harmful and that too many such are eaten by the American people. So, for moderation's sake we say:—

INSTEAD OF A SWEET."

COLLEGE GRADS ARE WILLING TO START CAREER AT BOTTOM

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Jan. 15.—The idea that the average college graduate expects to step out into the world with a $10,000 or even a $5,000 a year job seems to be out of date, according to a survey made at the Carnegie Institute of Technology.

That a large majority of college men are reconciled to the idea of a small beginning, was indicated in the report which showed that one-third of last year's graduates of the institute are taking business training courses ranging from three months to two years duration with the companies of their choice.

As such, the graduates are being trained in accordance with the principles and practices of their employers to better fit them for opportunities later as junior executives. The salaries, furthermore are far removed from $5,000 or $10,000 a year.

According to John D. Beatty, secretary of the Bureau of Recommendations at Carnegie Tech 5,772 placements with total earnings of $770,580 were found by the bureau for students and graduates of the school during the past year. Of this number, 374 were full-time positions, with yearly earnings of $62,262.50.

Sales work provided the most numerous openings for Carnegie Tech graduates during the year, the report showed.

Sixty-nine of the women graduates of the school during the year were placed in positions by the bureau. Their total earnings were $112,092. The positions included, dietitians, demonstrators, interior decorators, scientific assistants, secretaries, social workers and teachers.

"Light a Lucky and you'll never miss sweets that make you fat"

Constance Talmadge

Constance Talmadge, Charming Motion Picture Star

INSTEAD of eating between meals . . . instead of fattening sweets . . . beautiful women keep youthful slenderness these days by smoking Luckies. The smartest and loveliest women of the modern stage take this means of keeping slender . . . when others nibble fattening sweets, they light a Lucky!

Lucky Strike is a delightful blend of the world's finest tobaccos. These tobaccos are toasted—a costly extra process which develops and improves the flavor. That's why Luckies are a delightful alternative for fattening sweets. That's why there's real health in Lucky Strike. That's why folks say: "It's good to smoke Luckies."

For years this has been no secret to those men who keep fit and trim. They know that Luckies steady their nerves and do not harm their physical condition. They know that Lucky Strike is the favorite cigarette of many prominent athletes, who must keep in good shape. They respect the opinions of 20,679 physicians who maintain that Luckies are less irritating to the throat than other cigarettes.

A reasonable proportion of sugar in the diet is recommended, but the authorities are overwhelming that too many fattening sweets are harmful and that too many such are eaten by the American people. So, for moderation's sake we say:—

"REACH FOR A LUCKY
INSTEAD OF A SWEET."

TEMPERATURE RISE FOLLOWED BY SNOW HERE MONDAY NIGHT

Sub-zero temperature said farewell to Xenia Tuesday at least for the present but left in its place the heaviest snowfall of the season.

Xenia was literally snow-bound and citizens awakening Tuesday morning faced the necessity of digging themselves out from under a thick white blanket.

Starting at 6 p. m. Monday, the flakes began to fall with such intensity that the streets and pavements were soon carpeted and by midnight approximately two inches of snow had fallen. "And so on far into the night" until by Tuesday morning the layer had doubled in thickness.

Tuesday, however, the sky was clear, the sun beamed down and it was considerably warmer, or more correctly, perhaps, less cold. The mercury rested about ten degrees higher in thermometers but the change was not noticeable enough to write home about.

No relief is in sight Wednesday as more snow is on the menu.

While the head of the house was cleaning snow off the sidewalks, the youngsters were not unmindful of the snow. In such large quantity meant shelling, snowball fights, and so forth. The lagoon in Shawnee Park was frozen over sufficiently to permit skating or falling down.

Rev. Dr. Plymate, of Dayton, occupied the Presbyterian pulpit last Sabbath. He will also preach Jan. 20th.

Mr. Mac Harris was home last week from O. S. U. with an attack of flu.

Friends of Miss Anna Raney were grieved to know of her sudden death last week.

Miss Raney spent at least half of her life in this community and was highly esteemed in the Presbyterian Church of which she was a member and of which her father, Mr. James Raney, was a ruling elder for many years.

Mrs. J. E. Swaby and White B. Corry and Miss Florence White will attend a midwinter rally of Dayton Wesleyan at Westminster Church, Dayton, on Tuesday.

Mrs. H. R. Corry is ill with influenza.

The Knott family, Mr. Brough Rife, and Miss Alice Daines were guests at a dinner given Saturday by Dr. and Mrs. Leo Anderson at their home in Cedarville, honoring their brother, Mr. Paul Knott, of South Dakota.

BOARD TO SUPPORT COLONEL STEWART

CHICAGO, Jan. 15.—Col. Robert W. Stewart is assured of the support of the board of directors of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana in his fight against John D. Rockefeller, Jr., who is determined to oust him as chairman of the board of the giant oil corporation.

In a statement addressed to the 58,000 stockholders of the $750,000,000 corporation, Edward G. Seubert, president, and eight other members of the board, announced their intention of supporting Stewart's candidacy for re-election.

The statement declared Rockefeller's demand that Stewart's contract with the company be terminated was unjustified, and that Stewart's removal would be contrary to the best interests of the company.

SEEK THIRD MEMBER OF TRIO INVOLVED IN SEBOLD ROBBERY

Montgomery County deputy sheriffs inaugurated another intensive search Tuesday for the third member of a trio surprised in the act of looting the Sebald grocery at which Paul Artz, prominent farmer, near Osborn, is alleged to have been involved.

Artz originally gave out the information he was shot by a mysterious assailant but has since confessed, it is said, to being one of three robbers who attempted to burglarize the Sebald store and that he was shot in the face by Clem Herr, a justice of the peace, while making his escape.

The second member of the bandit trio, George Ishmael, 22, of Wildcat Road, who is also reported to have confessed to being implicated in the robbery, was arraigned before Squire Bert Badgley in Dayton Monday, charged with burglary and larceny. He pleaded not guilty.

He was bound over to the grand jury under $5,000 bond and unable to furnish bail, was remanded to the County Jail.

Artz is still confined in Miami Valley Hospital, where he was removed shortly after being shot. He is being guarded night and day and will be arraigned on a burglary and larceny charge as soon as his condition permits.

Hospital attendants announced that the patient is gradually recovering strength and predict his early recovery as complications are not anticipated.

A third unidentified man involved in the attempted robbery is said to be still at large.

In a statement addressed to the 58,000 stockholders of the $750,000,000 corporation, Edward G. Seibert, president, and eight other members of the board, announced their intention of supporting Stewart's candidacy for reelection.

The statement declared Rockefeller's demand that Stewart's connection with the company be terminated, was unjustified, and that Stewart's removal would be contrary to the best interests of the company.

SEEK THIRD MEMBER OF TRIO INVOLVED IN SEBOLD ROBBERY

Montgomery County deputy sheriffs inaugurated another intensive search Tuesday for the third member of a trio surprised in the act of looting the Sebold grocery at Sulphur Grove early Thursday in which Paul Artz, prominent farmer, near Osborn, is alleged to have been involved.

Artz originally gave out the information he was shot by a mysterious assailant but has since confessed, it is said, to being one of three robbers who attempted to burglarize the Sebold store and that he was shot in the face by Clem Herr, a justice of the peace, while making his escape.

The second member of the bandit trio, George Ishmael, 22, of Wildcat Road, who is also reported to have confessed to being implicated in the robbery, was arraigned before Squire Bert Badgley in Dayton Monday, charged with burglary and larceny. He pleaded not guilty.

He was bound over to the grand jury under $5,000 bond and unable to furnish bail, was remanded to the County Jail.

Artz is still confined in Miami Valley Hospital, where he was removed shortly after being shot. He is being guarded night and day and will be arraigned on a burglary and larceny charge as soon as his condition permits.

Hospital attendants announced that the patient is gradually recovering strength and predict his early recovery as complications are not anticipated.

A third unidentified man involved in the attempted robbery is said to be still at large.

HURLEY ON TRIAL

James Hurley, Xenia dairyman, went on trial before a jury in Common Pleas Court Tuesday on two counts of an indictment for petit larceny in which he is charged with the theft of a pint bottle of milk valued at seven cents from Herbert Hoig and a quart bottle of milk valued at thirteen cents from Charles Tindall last November 11.

His brother, Revell Hurley, previously had pleaded guilty to two counts of a similar indictment and was fined $15 and costs on each count.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

THE OMNIPRESENT GOD—Thus saith the Lord, The heaven is my throne, and the earth is my footstool: where is the house that ye build unto me? and where is the place of my rest? —Isaiah 66:1.

A GREAT AUTHOR'S VIEW

America's preoccupation with sex, its exaggerated interest in the privacies of the boudoir, is at last on the wane. Red-bloodedness is coming back in fiction.

So says E. Phillips Oppenheim, the English writer, and he, if anyone, should know—for he is today perhaps the biggest big business man engaged in the trade of letters. Mr. Oppenheim, wonder of wonders, is just concluding his 108th novel.

"The demand for sex is dropping. Crime is coming in again. A good romantic story is what they want," he declares.

Mr. Oppenheim says the great majority of his readers are men; he lives in France though enthusiastically British; he reads and likes Edgar Wallace but doesn't read much else in the line of fiction; he knows that Americans are the biggest buyers of his books.

"Why does Mr. Oppenheim write such a frightful amount?" it was asked. It seems he cannot help himself. Mr. Oppenheim seems to have been neither consumed nor scorched by his own so-called creative fire. He writes so much, because he talks his stories, dictates them, and they unroll upon his stenographers notebook . . .

Those who work because they "can't help it" are always happy. Those who work because they have to do not have quite so much fun.

BUSINESS AND IMMIGRATION

To clarify the business attitude toward immigration restriction, the Chamber of Commerce of the United States will submit to its membership, consisting of more than 1,500 commercial organizations throughout the country, a recommendation that the national origins provision of the Immigration Law be repealed. The subject will be discussed at the forthcoming annual meeting of the Chamber in Washington next year.

In support of the recommendation the committee which considered the question holds that the present quota system has been generally accepted and to change the basis at the present time would lead to confusion and needless contention.

The action of the committee points to the conclusion that America industry has decided that it no longer depends upon foreign sources to recruit its unskilled labor supply. Machines have taken the places of hundreds of thousands of aliens who formerly poured into the country to work in American factories. The decision to be made by the Chamber's membership will disclose whether in this respect the United States has become self-sufficient, whether in spite of its rapid industrial expansion labor efficiency has developed at an even more rapid pace.

The Way of the World

By GROVE PATTERSON

PATIENCE

School children today know more real science than Aristotle, Newton, or Galileo. The accumulated knowledge of the years, carefully handed down by scholars, has taken care of that. But few school children or grown-ups have the thing that made Aristotle, Newton, and Galileo great. They lack the master qualities of self-control and patience. They lack the self-control which makes them strong enough to keep at their books, and they lack the patience that keeps them going when knowledge doesn't come easily. Above all the great scientific thinkers of the past had patience. They were short on laboratory machinery but they were long on some fine human qualities which seem scarcer today than then.

FUNERALS

It is the custom of a certain tribe in India to have two funerals. One is held at the time of death and the second funeral comes a year later. That would be an interesting custom in this country. What will the community say about you the day after you have passed on, and what will the community say after you have been gone a year? Are we doing anything sufficiently important and useful to justify a funeral a year after we are gone? That would be a good time to sum up some people's lives.

INDEPENDENCE

Be careful what you ask for and from whom you ask it. The average politician, for example, expects a house and lot in return for every two-dollar favor. No matter how much we may want something it is not often worth the price of obligation to another. Success in business or the meeting of emergencies may make borrowing both necessary and wise. But borrowing ought always to be on a cold business basis, leaving no obligation other than the normal obligation to pay back. The sense of independence is one of the happiest "senses" man can have.

FREEDOM

Fortunately the human being, of whatever race, just naturally loves freedom. He not only craves a chance to express himself but if he is normal and decent he believes that all people who are not criminal or insane should have a chance to express themselves—should have a chance at freedom. In Italy the dictator Mussolini does not believe in freedom. He does not believe in freedom of expression or freedom of the press. An interesting result is apparent. Newspapers, forced to submit to government censorship, have lost circulation. That is a sign that people are still normal and healthy. They will read newspapers that enjoy the freedom of the press. They are less interested when they discover there is no longer any independence.

BABIES AND BABIES

Archeologists digging for evidence of the ways of early man find a cave baby's rattle. The toy is excavated near Kish, in Mesopotamia. Shaped like a hedgehog it contains a hard mud ball. No matter how far down the ages man has been coming the cave baby was not unlike the baby of civilization. Mental tests would doubtless reveal little difference. A baby's rattle has been in demand since the beginning of the human race.

The Diary
of a
New Yorker

By CHARLES B. DRISCOLL

NEW YORK — Leave it to George Jean Nathan to sock-analyze them. In his review on Peggy Joyce's recent play casually he wrote in part: "Miss Joyce, however, gives a surprisingly creditable account of herself. She has a charming speaking voice; her enunciation is twice as good as that of the average more experienced actress; she carries herself nicely; she wears clothes, as well as lack of clothes effectively; and her acting is sometimes quite passable. She has only one shortcoming. She lacks sex appeal. Her sophistication, hardness and lack of warmth rob her of that desirable quality."

In the words of that song hit, then: "It's not their voices that get Rolls-Royces — it's makin' whoopee!"

Kidding a Kidder

Did you know that a friend presented Paul Whiteman with a new bass fiddle for Christmas, but Paul cannot get it under his chin?

You've Met Him

A movie supervisor, you might have heard, is the type of fellow who rates from two to five thousand dollars per week just to offer a better suggestion than yours. Billy Rose, who just came back from Hollywood, tells this one about a pair of supervisors who were shipwrecked and then stranded on a desert island. After a fortnight one of the starved fellows found a can of beans. "Thank heavens!" he cried. "We are saved, saved, saved! I've found this can of beans!" "Hummum," grunted the other supervisor, "that's swell. But don't you think it would be better if we had some buttered toast?"

Getting Rich Quick

Take it from Samuel Morax, who edits New York Amusements, E. Haldeman-Julius, whose Little Blue Books are among the best sellers, has an idea that is making him richer. He borrowed his trick from the chin-emas and is putting "box-office" titles on lagging sellers. Thus, "The Piece of Gold," by Theophile Gautier, has become "The Quest for a Blind Mistress."

A Form of Criticism

Texas Gillman, who is sore at Hollywood, anyway, says now that they have sound pictures they'll have to hire doubles for the two-syllable words.

The menus on the Ziegfeld "Midnight Frolic" offer for $1.75: "Onions Frits an Jamboin." It is ham and eggs.

A showgirl just helved a musical hit to go to Hollywood. "Why," asked a tan reporter of one of her friends, "did she go to the coast?"

"Her husband is dying out there," was the cold report, "and she's going to see him. He dies she won't have to go to Reno. But if he doesn't, she will."

Kellygrams

By FRED C. KELLY

London is full of laughs. Every cockney chauffeur is funny. All English women look funny. Even the highest type of English gentleman, charming as he is, is somehow funny. No matter where you look, there is somebody who might be playing a part in a circus. Every time I see the horse guards at White-chapel—diligently guarding the king, even though the king doesn't live there and is never in that neighborhood at all—I catch myself wondering when the hand wagon and animal cages will be along.

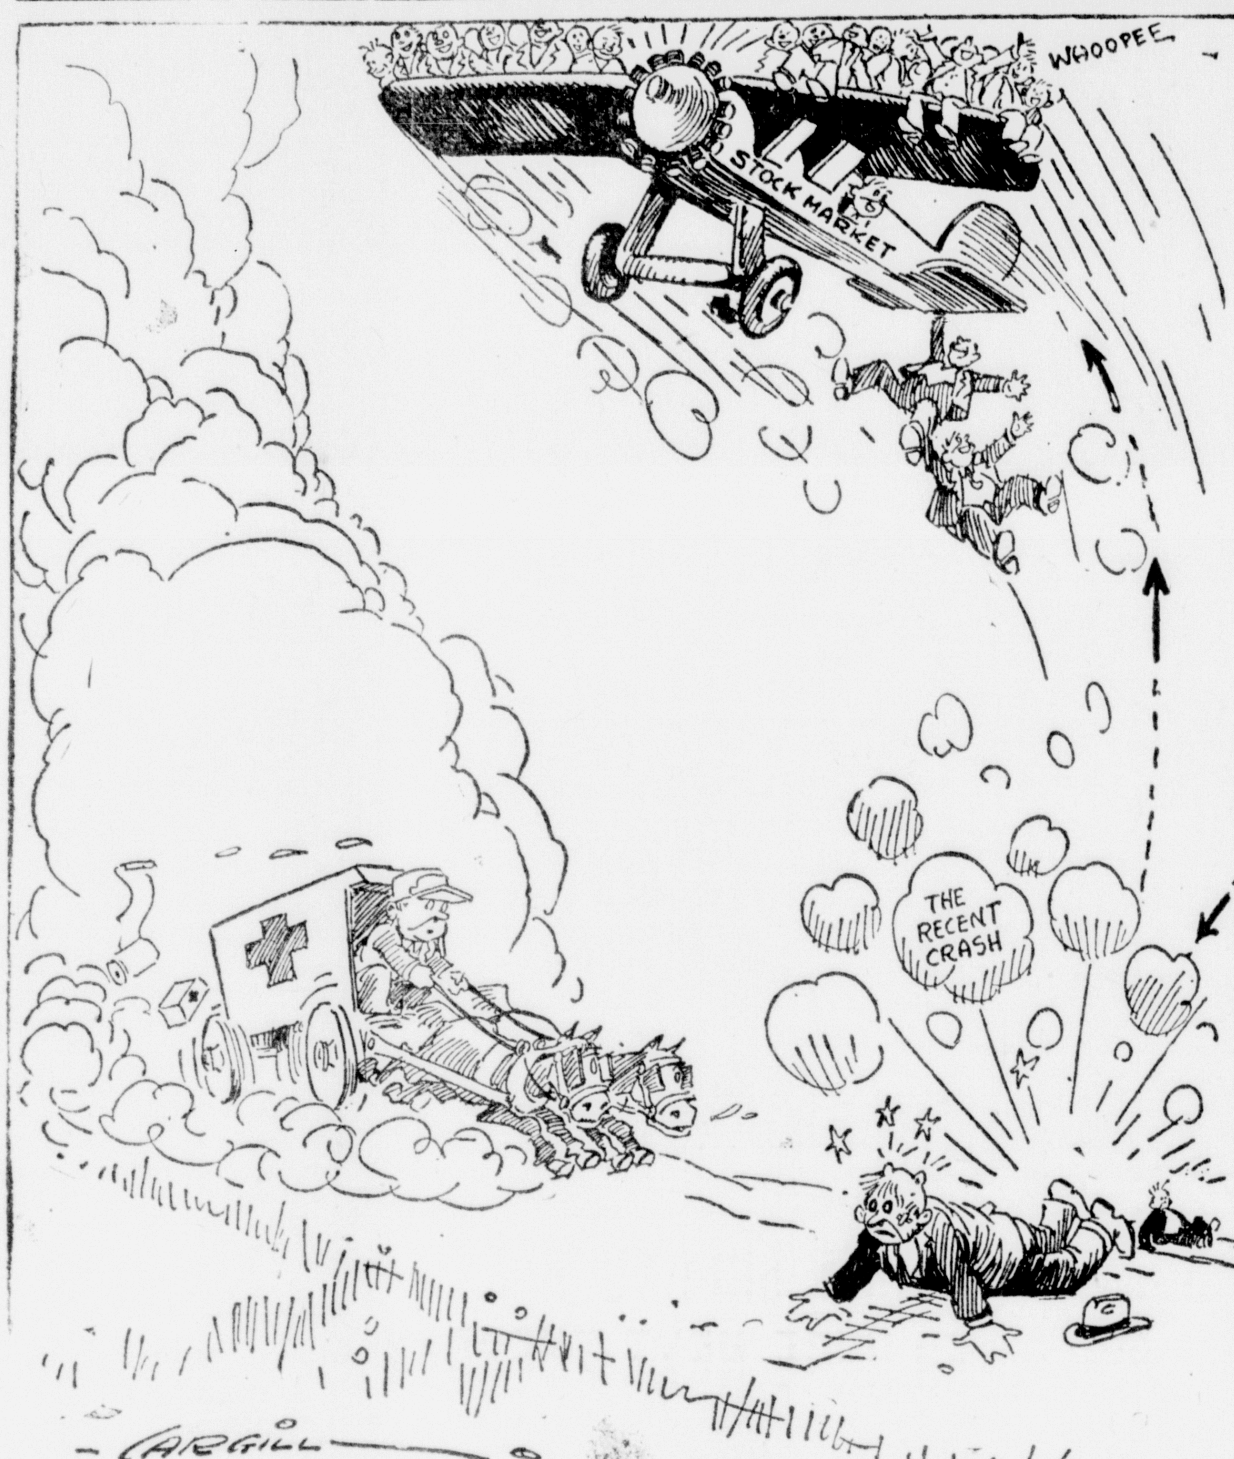

I wish I knew more about the home life of these horse guards. Just imagine getting up in the morning, gulping down one's breakfast, afraid of being late at the job and then hurrying to White-chapel to jump into one's working clothes including red, gold-braided coat and fur hat four feet high. I wonder what they think about while sitting there rigidly on horseback, sword in hand, magnificently doing nothing. Some day I'm going to follow one of these fellows home and see if he slouches about the house in old clothes and carpet slippers. I wonder, too, if when he comes in his wife looks up from her ironing and says: "Well, did you have a hard day?"

THE QUESTION MARK
(HOW MUCH LONGER WILL THIS ONE STAY UP?)Behind the Scenes in Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON—Calendar reform is no joke, as at first I thought it was. I begin to believe now that George Eastman (camera man) plan would result in confusion worse confounded, precisely as Congressman Sol Bloom says it would.

Sol leads the anti-Eastman forces in what promises to develop into a grand good fight—for George is very set in his ways, too.

In principle, the congressman does not oppose reform, but the proposed Eastman system, so he says, would get the world into the worst jam since mankind began to count the days of the week. Not to be purely destructive, Sol offers an alternative of his own.

"For the first 13 28-day months," says Sol, "everything would be lovely. Then, however, would come a 35th day which the Eastmanites would refuse to include in any week. To orthodox Christians it would be Sunday and they would observe it accordingly. The Eastmanites would observe the next day as their Sunday."

"The Mohammedans—we have few of them in America but this reform is to be international—the Mohammedans observe Friday. The ensuing Thursday would be Friday to them. Friday would be Saturday to the Jews. Saturday would be Sunday to orthodox Christians, and Sunday would be Sunday to the rest."

"Four holy days in a row! A fine way to simplify the calendar!"

"The year after that," continued the congressman, "Wednesday would be Friday to the Mohammedans, Thursday would be Saturday to the Jews, Friday would be Sunday to the orthodox Christians and the next day would be Sunday to reformed calendar folk."

"A bad mix-up. Well, I guess you."

"I forgot to be afraid in my sheer admiration of the marvelous grace that distinguished the panther. The 'panther crawl,' while reminiscent of the wild creature's grace, is nevertheless an exercise which is designed to develop the ease of muscular action, which is the element of beautiful motion."

In the first position you crouch low, your left knee brought close to the chin, your right leg back and head over the bent knee.

Now walk on open hands, your left knee brought close to the ground, and the right leg dragging. Now bring your right leg up and around until it reaches a

"Not only four different days of worship!—but three of them would be constantly drifting about, through the whole length of the week."

"The Eastman-ites imagine," scoffed Sol, "that the world would soon adopt the new reckoning."

"Indeed! Have the Jews ever abandoned their Sabbath? Have the Seventh Day Adventists ever abandoned theirs? Or the Mohammedans theirs? Depend on it, orthodox Christians, by the millions, would refuse to change theirs."

"Not counting the Jews' Saturday and the few Mohammedans' Friday, we would have two Sundays weekly most years, about equally observed."

"And the contention over Sunday-closing laws!" warned the New York representative.

"Have the Eastman-ites thought of that? The orthodox would insist on general observance of their day and on working on the official Sunday. The Eastman-ites would be just as insistent on the reformed program."

"Saturday never has presented a serious problem, the Jews are in so small a minority."

"The Christians would be sure to divide into two formidable camps."

"So the only course," urges Sol, "if we are to reform at all, is to adopt my solution—28-day months after 28-day month, uninterrupted, straightaway for 23 years, when, including leap years, we shall have enough accumulated extra days to give us an extra month."

"It will throw the seasons a little out of joint, but the days will remain where they belong, as we have counted them since the dawn of history."

"Otherwise our calendar will be one long headache from now on."

position under your chin. It sounds considerably more difficult than it really is, but I hope that the directions will help you to master the simple rudiments of the exercise.

And that completes my manual of "graphic" exercises. I do hope that they will prove to you how pleasantly interesting the daily dozen can become when treated with a little vein of interest and imagination.

Diet and Health

By LULU HUNT PETERS M. D.
Author of "Diet and Health" and "Diet For Children"

That Three-Day Liquid Bogy

"About 14 months ago, I sent for your booklet on reducing and started right in. I lost 16 pounds in the first eight weeks. Then we moved, and in about four months I gained back 15 of the 16 pounds I had lost. So I started again and now I weigh 113 pounds. I am 5 ft. 1 in. tall and did weigh 184 pounds! I took about eight months to lose the 71 pounds. I did not go on the three-day liquid diet because my husband objected to my dieting at all. But he hasn't any more! Last night he gave me the first compliment I have had from him in eleven years, so you can see it pays. He said, 'You look years younger and a lot better since you got those gobs of fat off.'"

"Before I close, I want to tell you of a friend. She is 4 ft. 10 in. tall and weighed 247 pounds. To date she has lost nearly 30 pounds in three months. But she goes on a three-day liquid diet each four weeks. MRS. M."

It isn't necessary to go on the three-day liquid diet as a start, if you don't want to. It is a good plan, however, for you immediately to shrink your stomach and get rid of a lot of excess water which the tissues are holding, and also considerable of the fat. From five to ten pounds in weight can be lost during these three days, and your stomach (if mean the inner organ) actually does contract so that it can be satisfied with much less food.

There are many who postpone reducing because they are afraid of this three-day liquid diet period, and for these, cutting the calories down to their reducing number (1200 for the average sized person and less for the (shorter) will give results, only a little slower. Still another plan, for those who hate to begin to diet, is to gradually get down to the reducing number. For instance, the first day you start, cut out 300 to 400 calories from your evening meal. The next day, cut out 200 or 300 from your noon meal and the following day cut down on the calories for breakfast.

As your meal is served, mentally eliminate the things you are going to cut out and then do it. For instance, if you have been using two pats of butter (200 C.) cut out 175 of this and take only one-quarter pat. If you have been in the habit of taking two slices of bread (one full slice) one-half inch thick, 100 C.), cut it down to one-half slice, and so cut out 150 calories. If your salad is served with mayonnaise dressing, scrape off as much as you can. If you manage to scrape off one full tablespoonful, you have taken off 100 C.

It is not uncommon to gain after a loss, but once having an intelligent insight into the reason for your extra weight, you are not going to be contented with your gain and are certainly going to get after yourself again. As I told you so many times, you must remember that in order to stay normal weight you must re-educate your food tastes; otherwise you will surely gain, for you will go back to the same eating habits.

I congratulate you and your friend on your loss and thank you for telling us, Mrs. M.

Those who need instructions on how to lose or gain weight may have our pamphlet on the subject.

TAKING SELF-INVENTORY
MAKES GOOD RESOLVE

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

Now that we have had time to break our New Year's resolutions we might make some more. During the month of January the stores and factories take inventory. Why not do the same with ourselves? Are we getting into a rut? Have we had any new ideas lately about our homes or our jobs? Do we become hide-bound? Do we condemn people because they are different from us? Have we our own little smug code of morals and think others are immoral because they don't do as we do? Right here is where our resolutions come in. Resolve that we will be broadminded and charitable if we cannot be sympathetic and understanding. And shake ourselves out of our ruts, even if we have to go to school again to do it.

"Dear Mrs. Lee: Just two more girls asking for your good advice. We are 15 years old. We know two good looking boys and like them very well—not for their looks, but they have never asked to take us out. They pay a little attention to us. Would it be proper to ask them to our home? If we have them up we will dance, play cards, and sing, and of course, refreshments. Please suggest a nice way that will make them want to come. To tell you the truth, Mrs. Lee, when these boys really cared for us was in the grammar grades. We had a tendency to act silly. Of course, boys don't like that and count it very much against a girl. We have found out that these boys still figure that we're silly. We want to prove to them that we no longer have that against us."

B. V. M.: My dear, just what do you mean when you say your boy friend treats you disrespectfully? If his interference with your drinking and smoking is the disrespectful treatment, he is merely showing you that he doesn't like his girl to do those things, and if you object, you don't need to go with him. If you love him, you naturally want to be the kind of a girl he admires, don't you? You are right to have more than one boy friend at your age. If you do break with him you might not care to have the watch he gave you, but as you are not engaged, you need not return it if you do not care to do so.

ANXIOUSLY WAITING: Sorry I have not answered your letters before. Are you sure about it? Send the boy friend a birthday card and say on it that you are sorry he is "mad," but you are not to blame, and a true friend does not get angry so easily.

Peter's Adventure

By MRS. FLORENCE SMITH VINCENT

DARKNESS—AND THE MARCHERS HALT

When at last the moon arose the Turkey decided that it was high time for them to rest.

So they stood in marching formation. They seemed to be waiting for something. Peter wondered what, but before he had a chance to ask his friend Gobbler who stood as motionless as the rest, a cry rang out.

"Fall out," gobbled a hoarse voice, and at the command the Turkey troops broke ranks and scattered in all directions.

Of course Peter thought they would seek out trees in which to roost—he remembered that the barnyard birds slept in the branches of the old apple tree at home—but these wild fellows didn't seem to care very much whether they spent the night in the air or on the ground.

Some Turkeys, to be sure, did fly to convenient boughs, but these choice places were soon taken (there were not half enough branches to go around, for there were not nearly so many trees in the plains as there had been in the mountains).

The rest of the flock, however, made no fuss, but crouched down upon the cool ground and went to sleep.

Peter didn't like the idea of getting down from Gobbler's back. He couldn't see well in the dark, and he was in a strange country, where he did not know his way about. How could he tell what enemy might be prowling about searching for a little boy to devour?

Gobbler, his steed, was very drowsy indeed, and the boy had to poke him twice to make the fellow pay any attention to him.

thing," pleaded he, bending down and talking into Gobbler's right ear. "Do you mind if I spend the night up here on your back?"

"Of course I don't," mumbled Gobbler sleepily. "Make yourself comfortable. If anything should happen that I should have to run you would be mounted, and goodness knows if you were not and

"PLEASANT DREAMS!" MURMURED GOBBLER DRIVELY.

I should be frightened I might chase off and forget you, though I'd not mean to, of course.

"Pleasant dreams, boy." If you should see any one prowling about or hear a queer noise be sure to give the alarm, although it would have to be a pretty sly foe who could creep upon the Turkeys unawares.

Mr. Oppenheim seems to have been neither consumed nor scorched by his own so-called creative fire. He 'writes' so much, because he talks his stories, dictates them, and they unroll upon his stenographers notebook . . .

Those who work because they "can't help it" are always happy. Those who work because they have to do not have quite so much fun.

BUSINESS AND IMMIGRATION

To clarify the business attitude toward immigration restriction, the Chamber of Commerce of the United States will submit to its membership, consisting of more than 1,500 commercial organizations throughout the country, a recommendation that the national origins provision of the Immigration Law be repealed. The subject will be discussed at the forthcoming annual meeting of the Chamber in Washington next year.

In support of the recommendation the committee which considered the question holds that the present quota system has been generally accepted and to change the basis at the present time would lead to confusion and needless contention.

The action of the committee points to the conclusion that America industry has decided that it no longer depends upon foreign sources to recruit its unskilled labor supply. Machines have taken the places of hundreds of thousands of aliens who formerly poured into the country to work in American factories. The decision to be made by the Chamber's membership will disclose whether in this respect the United States has become self-sufficient, whether in spite of its rapid industrial expansion labor efficiency has developed at an even more rapid pace.

The Way of the World

By GROVE PATTERSON

PATIENCE

School children today know more real science than Aristotle, Newton, or Galileo. The accumulated knowledge of the years, carefully handed down by scholars, has taken care of that. But few school children or grown-ups have the thing that made Aristotle, Newton, and Galileo great. They lack the master qualities of self-control and patience. They lack the self-control which makes them strong enough to keep at their books, and they lack the patience that keeps them going when knowledge doesn't come easily. Above all the great scientific thinkers of the past had patience. They were short on laboratory machinery but they were long on some fine human qualities which seem scarcer today than then.

FUNERALS

It is the custom of a certain tribe in India to have two funerals. One is held at the time of death and the second funeral comes a year later. That would be an interesting custom in this country. What will the community say about you the day after you have passed on, and what will the community say after you have been gone a year? Are we doing anything sufficiently important and useful to justify a funeral a year after we are gone? That would be a good time to sum up some people's lives.

INDEPENDENCE

Be careful what you ask for and from whom you ask it. The average politician, for example, expects a house and lot in return for every two-dollar favor. No matter how much we may want something it is not often worth the price of obligation to another. Success is business or the meeting of emergencies may make borrowing both necessary and wise. But borrowing ought always to be on a cold business basis, leaving no obligation other than the normal obligation to pay back. The sense of independence is one of the happiest "senses" man can have.

FREEDOM

Fortunately the human being, of whatever race, just naturally loves freedom. He not only craves a chance to express himself but if he is normal and decent he believes that all people who are not criminal or insane should have a chance to express themselves—should have a chance at freedom. In Italy the dictator Mussolini does not believe in freedom. He does not believe in freedom of expression or freedom of the press. An interesting result is apparent. Newspapers, forced to submit to government censorship, have lost circulation. That is a sign that people are still normal and healthy. They will read newspapers that enjoy the freedom of the press. They are less interested when they discover there is no longer any independence.

BABIES AND BABIES

Archeologists digging for evidence of the ways of early man find a cave baby's rattle. The toy is excavated near Kish, in Mesopotamia. Shaped like a hedgehog it contains a hard mud ball. No matter how far down the ages man has been coming the cave baby was not unlike the baby of civilization. Mental tests would doubtless reveal little difference. A baby's rattle has been in demand since the beginning of the human race.

The Diary

of a

New Yorker

By CHARLES B. DRISCOLL

NEW YORK — Leave it to George Jean Nathan to sock-analyze them. In his review on Peggy Joyce's recent play casually he wrote in part: "Miss Joyce, however, gives a surprisingly credible account of herself. She has a charming speaking voice; her enunciation is twice as good as that of the average more experienced actress; she carries herself nicely; she wears clothes, as well as lack of clothes effectively; and her acting is sometimes quite passable. She has only one short-coming. She lacks sex appeal. Her sophistication, hardness and lack of warmth rob her of that desirable quality."

In the words of that song hit, then: "It's not their voices that get Rolls-Royces — it's makin' whoopee!"

Kidding a Kidder Did you know that a friend presented Paul Whitman with a new bass fiddle for Christmas, but Paul cannot get it under his chin?

You've Met Him A movie supervisor, you might have heard, is the type of fellow who rates from two to five thousand dollars per week just to offer a better suggestion than yours. Billy Rose, who just came back from Hollywood, tells this one about a pair of supervisors who were shipwrecked and stranded on a desert island. After a fortnight one of the starved fellows found a can of beans. "Thank heavens!" he cried. "We are saved, saved, saved! I've found this can of beans!" "Hummum," grunted the other supervisor, "that's swell. But don't you think it would be better if we had some buttered toast?"

Getting Rich Quick Take it from Samuel Morax, who edits New York Amusements, E. Haldeman-Julius, whose Little Blue Books are among the best sellers, has an idea that is making him richer. He borrowed his trick from the chin-amas and is putting "box-office" titles on lagging sellers. Thus, "The Fleece of Gold," by Theophile Gautier, has become "The Quest for a Blond Mistress."

A Form of Criticism Tex Guinn, who is sore at Hollywood, anyway, says now that they have sound pictures they'll have to hire doubles for the two-syllable words.

The menus on the Ziegfeld "Midnight Frolic" offer for $1.75: "Omelet Frits au Jambon. It is ham and eggs."

A showgirl just heaved a musical hit to go to Hollywood. "Why," asked a fan reporter of one of her friends, "did she go to the coast?" "Her husband is dying out there," was the cold reply, "and she's going to see him. He dies she won't have to go to Reno. But if he doesn't, she will."

Kellygrams

London is full of laughs. Every cockney chatter is funny. All English women look funny. Even the highest type of English gentleman, charming as he is, is somehow funny. No matter where one looks, there is somebody who might be playing a part in a circus. Every time I see the horse guards at Whitehall—diligently guarding the king, even though the king doesn't live there and is never in that neighborhood at all—I catch myself wondering when the hand wagon and animal cages will be along.

I wish I knew more about the home life of these horse guards. Just imagine getting up in the morning, rubbing down one's breakfast, afraid of being late at the job and then hurrying to Whitehall to jump into one's working clothes including red, gold-braided coat and fur hat four feet high. I wonder what they think about while sitting there rigidly on horseback, sword in hand, magnificently doing nothing. Some day I'm going to follow one of these fellows home and see if he slouches about the house in old clothes and carpet slippers. I wonder, too, if when he comes in his wife looks up from her ironing and says: "Well, did you have a hard day?"

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON—Calendar reform is no joke, as at first I thought it was. I begin to believe now that George Eastman (camera man) plan would result in confusion worse confounded, precisely as Congressman Sol Bloom says it would.

Sol leads the anti-Eastman forces in what promises to develop into a grand good fight—for George is very set in his ways, too.

In principle, the congressman does not oppose reform, but the proposed Eastman system, so he says, would get the world into the worst jam since mankind began to count the days of the week. Not to be purely destructive, Sol offers an alternative of his own.

"For the first 13 28-day months," says Sol, "everything would be lovely."

"Then, however, would come a 365th day which the Eastmanites would refuse to include in any week. To orthodox Christians it would be Sunday and they would observe it accordingly. The Eastmanites would observe the next day as their Sunday."

"The Mohammedans—we have few of them in America but this reform is to be international—the Mohammedans observe Friday. The ensuing Thursday would be Friday to them. Friday would be Saturday to the Jews. Saturday would be Sunday to orthodox Christians, and Sunday would be Sunday to the rest."

"Four holy days in a row? A fine way to simplify the calendar!"

"The year after that," continued the congressman, "Wednesday would be Friday to the Mohammedans, Thursday would be Saturday to the Jews, Friday would be Sunday to the orthodox Christians and the next day would be Sunday to reformed calendar folk."

"A bad mix-up. Well, I guess yes."

How to Achieve Beauty

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

If we could only cultivate the supple, sinuous grace which characterizes the jungle beasts, I shall never forget the one opportunity I had of seeing a panther in its natural habitat. The ease with which the velvet-footed paws stepped over across the velvet. The sudden crouch as the beautiful creature sensed danger. Then, with one supple turn, how the slender, vibrant body was galvanized into action, and like a flash of mottled gold, disappeared into a clump of underbrush.

I forgot to be afraid in my sheer admiration of the marvelous grace that distinguished the panther. The "panther crawl," while hardly reminiscent of the supple perfection of the wild creature's grace, is nevertheless an exercise which is designed to develop the ease of muscular action, which is the element of beautiful motion.

In the first position you crouch low, your left knee brought close to the chin, your right leg back and head over the bent knee.

Now walk on open hands, your left knee brought close to the ground, and the right leg dragging. Now bring your right leg up and around until it reaches a position under your chin.

It sounds considerably more difficult than it really is, but I hope that the directions will help you to master the simple rudiments of the exercise.

And that completes my manual of "graphic" exercises. I do hope that they will prove to you how pleasantly interesting the daily dozen can become when treated with a little vein of interest and imagination.

Diet and Health

By LULU HUNT PETERS M. D.
Author of "Diet and Health" and "Diet For Children"

That Three-Day Liquid Bogy About 14 months ago, I sent for your booklet on reducing and started right in. I lost 16 pounds in the first eight weeks. Then we moved, and in about four months I gained back 15 of the 16 pounds I had lost. So I started again and now I weigh 113 pounds. I am 5 ft. 1 in. tall and did weigh 184 pounds! I took about eight months to lose the 71 pounds. I did not go on the three-day liquid diet because my husband objected to my dieting at all. But he doesn't any more! Last night he gave me the first compliment I have had from him in eleven years, so you can see he likes it. He said, "You look years younger and a lot better since you got those gobs of fat off."

"Before I close, I want to tell you of a friend. She is 4 ft. 10 in. tall and weighed 247 pounds. To date she has lost nearly 30 pounds in three months. But she goes on a three-day liquid diet each four weeks, Mrs. M."

It isn't uncommon to gain after a loss, but one has gained an intelligent insight into the reason for your extra weight, you are not going to be contented with your gain and are certainly going to get after yourself again. As I told you so many times, you must remember that in order to stay normal weight you must reduce your food tastes; otherwise you will surely gain, for you will go back to the same eating habits.

I congratulate you and your friend on your loss and thank you for telling us, Mrs. M.

Those who need instructions on how to lose or gain weight may have our pamphlet on the subject.

TAKING SELF-INVENTORY MAKES GOOD RESOLVE By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

Now that we have had time to break our New Year's resolutions we might make some more. During the month of January the stores and factories take inventory. Why not do the same with ourselves? Are we getting into a rut? Have we had any new ideas lately about our homes or our jobs? Are we becoming people because they are different from us? Have we our own little smug code of morals and think others are immoral because they don't do as we do? Right here is where our resolutions come in. Resolve that we will be broadminded and charitable if we cannot be sympathetic and understanding. And shake ourselves out of our ruts, even if we have to go to school again to do it.

"Dear Mrs. Lee: Just two more girls asking for your good advice. We are 15 years old. We know two good looking boys and like them very well not for their looks, but they have never asked to take us out. They pay a little attention to us. Would it be proper to ask them to our home? If we have them up we will dance, play cards, and sing, and of course, refreshments. Please suggest a nice way that will make them want to come. To tell you the truth, Mrs. Lee, when these boys really cared for us was in the grammar grades. We had a tendency to act silly. Of course boys don't like that and count it very much against a girl. We have found out that these boys still figure that we're silly. We want to prove to them that we no longer have that against us."

B. V. M.: My dear, just what do you mean when you say your friend treats you disrespectfully? If his interference with your drinking and smoking is the disrespectful treatment, he is merely showing you that he doesn't like his girl to do those things, and if you object you don't need to go with him. If you love him, you naturally want to be the kind of a girl he admires, don't you? You are right to have more than one boy friend at your age. If you do break with him you might not care to have the watch to remind you, but as you are not engaged you need not return it if you do not care to do so.

ANXIOUSLY WAITING: Sorry I have not answered your letters before. Are you sure about it? Send the boy friend a birthday card and say on it that you are sorry he is "mad," but you are not to blame, and a true friend does not get angry so easily.

Peter's Adventure

By MRS. FLORENCE SMITH VINCENT

DARKNESS—AND THE MARCHERS' HALT

When at last the moon arose the Turkey decided that it was high time for them to rest. So they came to a stop, but there they stood in marching formation. They seemed to be waiting for something. Peter wondered what, but before he had a chance to ask his friend Gobbler who stood as motionless as the rest, a cry rang out.

"Fall out!" gobbled a hoarse voice, and at the command the Turkey troops broke ranks and scattered in all directions.

Of course Peter thought they would seek out trees in which to roost—but they didn't. They didn't seem to care very much whether they spent the night in the air or on the ground.

Some Turkeys, to be sure, did fly to convenient boughs, but these choice places were soon taken (there were not half enough boughs to go around, for there were not nearly so many trees in the plains as there had been in the mountains).

The rest of the flock, however, made no fuss, but crouched down upon the cool ground and went to sleep.

Peter didn't like the idea of getting down from Gobbler's back. He couldn't see well in the dark, and he was in a strange country, where he did not know his way about. How could he tell what enemy might be prowling about searching for a little boy to devour?

Gobbler, his steed, was very drowsy indeed, and the boy had to poke him twice to make the fellow pay any attention to him.

"Gobbler, Gobbler, please don't go to sleep before I ask you some-

"PLEASANT DREAMS!" MURKED GOBBLER DROWSY

I should be frightened I might crash off and forget you, though I'd mean to, of course.

"Pleasant dreams, boy!" If you should see any one prowling about or hear a queer noise be sure to give the alarm, although I would give to be a pretty shy fellow who could creep upon the Turkey's unawares."

THE LIFE OF TEX RICKARD

Being A Colorful Account Of One Of America's Most Colorful Characters

(Following is the fifth chapter of "The Life of Tex Rickard," written by George Kirksey of the United Press staff. Additional chapters will follow daily.—Editor.)

By GEORGE KIRKSEY

(Copyright, 1929 By United Press)

Tex Rickard made a dramatic re-entry into the fight game in 1910, four years after he had astounded the boxing world by successfully staging his first fight between Joe Gans and Battling Nelson in the little desert mining town of Goldfield, Nev.

During the intervening years Rickard devoted his time to mining speculation. He was employed by a syndicate to buy mining claims from individuals who were unable to meet their mortgages when, late in 1909, he was summoned to Duluth by Thomas F. Cole, copper king on a business proposition in mining holdings in which they were interested.

The entire country at this time was excited about the possibility of James J. Jeffries, the retired undefeated heavyweight champion, returning to the ring in an effort to recapture the title for the white race from Jack Johnson, negro titleholder.

After they had completed their business transactions Cole said:

"Why don't you go after the Johnson-Jeffries match, Tex?"

Every big promoter in the country was bidding for the bout and Rickard explained that he wasn't in a financial position to compete against them.

"Go after that fight Tex," Cole replied. "If it's only money that you need you can count on me for as much as you want. Outbid every promoter by $20,000, if necessary, to go the match."

Rickard made his decision on the train going back to Ely, Nev., and wired Cole that he had decided to take him up on his offer and go after the match.

"I knew I would have to act fast," Rickard said afterwards. "The big was on promoters already had started east to sign Johnson."

On his way to New York Rickard read in a Chicago newspaper that Johnson was playing a vaudeville engagement in Pittsburgh. Rickard changed his plans and gambled on getting to Pittsburgh before Saturday night when Johnson was due to close his engagement.

The move proved to be one of the smartest ever made by Rickard and gave him the inside track to getting Johnson's signature.

Rickard arrived in Pittsburgh Saturday night and, instead of going to the theater to look for Johnson, called at the boarding house where the negro was living. Johnson was not there, but the landlady informed him that Mrs. Johnson was in.

When Mrs. Johnson, a white woman, appeared Rickard attempted to enlist her aid in getting Johnson to sign with him.

"I'll buy you the best sealskin coat I can find if you'll go back to sign with me to meet Jeffries," Tex told her.

She agreed and when she arrived in New York City Rickard presented her with a $100 sealskin coat as he had promised. She used her influence, which was no little, in persuading Johnson to cast his lot with Rickard.

Rickard met Johnson in a black and tan cabaret in Harlem to talk business. The negro champion was serving champagne and entertaining his crowd of friends as though he were a millionaire.

The negotiations hadn't progressed very far when Johnson said:

"Look here, Mr. Tex, I need dough."

Rickard pulled out his wallet and gave Johnson $2500 without batting an eye. Rickard's tactics made a hit with the negro.

"I likes yo way of doing things," Johnson said. "We is playing ball together."

Boxing was illegal in New York at that time and the bids for the bout had to be opened in Hoboken, N. J., across the river. Led by James J. Coffroth, now president of the Tia Juana Jockey Club who was foremost promoter of that day, a large group of promoters and newspaper men crossed the river in a ferry for the formal signing of Johnson.

When the bids were opened in the ferry house, each had a check attached. One read $60,000, another $70,000 and then Rickard's offer was opened. It read:

"$101,000."

Johnson's famous golden smile broke out in all its splendor.

Then Rickard placed his trump card by tossing twenty $1000 bills on the table. It was similar to the trick he had used in placing the $30,000 in $20 gold pieces in the window of a shack for Battling Nelson and his manager to see, when they arrived in Goldfield.

"Stop everything," Johnson interrupted. "This pal's got 'em all. I'm fighting for Mr. Tex."

"The man is absolutely crazy," Coffroth said. "He'll go broke and sink a lot of others with him. The bout can't possibly draw over $100,000."

Rickard began preparations for the bout and had no difficulty getting Jeffries' signature after he had previously signed failed to get Johnson. San Francisco was selected as the site for the bout and after Tex had spent $25,000 on the arena and other preparations, the governor of California decided he would not permit the fight to take place in that state.

Losing no time, Rickard transferred the fight to Reno, Nev., where it was held under a broiling sun on July 4, 1910. There was one drawback after another before the bout actually took place. The Jeffries crowd created no end of trouble about the referee.

Rickard finally was agreed on as a compromise and he was the only professional fight he ever refereed.

The gate was $270,755, the largest up to that time. The moving pictures of the fight netted more than $200,000. Johnson received $70,600 and Jeffries $50,000. Rickard's profit exceeded $100,000 after he had paid all the bills and reimbursed Cole for the money he had loaned him.

Jeffries was knocked out in the fifteenth round.

(Tomorrow's chapter will tell of Rickard's decision to invade New York and the Willard-Moran fight.)

"BIGGEST" FARM BUREAU MEET PROMISED HERE NEXT TUESDAY

The "biggest and best" annual County Farm Bureau meeting in the history of the organization, is the slogan being used by the program committee in arranging for the all-day agricultural conference next Tuesday, January 22. The meeting will be held in the assembly room of the court house, Xenia, and will begin promptly at 10 a. m.

The organization is fortunate in being able to obtain L. B. Palmer, president of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation as one of the main speakers for that day. Mr. Palmer, who was reared on a farm and is in close touch with agricultural conditions, will be heard with interest by his many Greene County friends.

L. D. Kingsbury of the Eastern States Co., who also is scheduled as speaker on the afternoon's program, is in close touch with co-operative livestock marketing, and will bring some interesting facts to his hearers. Although Mr. Kingsbury has not previously appeared before Greene County audiences, he will prove a most interesting speaker it is said. Mr. Kingsbury has been with this movement since its organization and is well acquainted with the co-operative marketing plan.

Reports showing the growth of the affiliated organizations of the Farm Bureau will also feature the day's program, and election of directors at large will be held.

The Greene County Orchestra under the direction of W. R. Sayrs, will have a prominent place on the program.

Farmers from every part of Greene and surrounding counties are expected to attend this annual agricultural event.

ARMOUR SECOND TO SMITH IN GOLF OPEN

RIVIERA COUNTRY CLUB, Los Angeles, Calif., Jan. 15.—Tommy Armour, of Washington, D. C., came in one stroke ahead of Leo Diegel of Agua Caliente to win second money in the final play of the Los Angeles $10,000 open golf tournament here yesterday.

Armour's card of 291 for 72 holes earned him $1,750.

MacDonald Smith finished Sunday and clinched first money with 255, winning the championship for the second consecutive year. Darkness forced Armour and ten other leaders to quit play on the last two holes.

Armour would have had 289 had he shot par golf on the last hole, but his ball landed in a tree trunk and he was forced to lift out with a one-stroke penalty. He took seven for the par four hole.

Diegel, with a final card of 292, took third money of $875, edging in ahead of Horton Smith, of Joplin, Mo., who received $600.

Walter Hagen was a disappointment to his followers, finishing with a 306, which tied for 15th place and took $100.

AUTOISTS UNHURT AS CARS COLLIDE

Dr. and Mrs. Frank M. Chambliss, this city, escaped injury when the rear of their sedan was struck by a coupe driven by L. Lewis, Cincinnati, O., employee of the York Ice Machine Co., at the overhead bridge on the Springfield and Xenia Pike just south of Old Town at 9:15 a. m. Tuesday.

Dr. and Mrs. Chambliss were traveling to Xenia from their cottage north of Old Town and the collision occurred when Lewis, driving toward Springfield, swerved to one side to avoid crashing into a concrete abutment. Both machines were slightly damaged but none of the occupants were hurt.

Pape's COLD COMPOUND

er. It's a simple compound the druggist has in tablets. Pleasant-tasting, but it surely has the "authority!"

Plenty of people with a bad cold in the morning have been rid of it by night; and the secret is Pape's Cold Compound. You'll think it just luck the first time, but it always goes to the spot. Druggists have it for 35c.

THE RIGHT WAY TO BANISH FAT

Combat a cause which modern research has discovered. Turn food into fuel and energy, rather than into fat. Supply a natural element which your system lacks. That is the method embodied in Marmola's prescription tablets.

People have used Marmola for 20 years—millions of boxes of it. They have told others the results. Now, in almost every circle, you can see the results of a natural element which your system lacks. That is the method embodied in Marmola's prescription tablets.

A book in each box of Marmola tells you the formula, also the reasons for results. You will know why the effects come, and why they are beneficial. Go ask your druggist—in fairness to yourself—for a $1 box of Marmola.

THE LIFE OF TEX RICKARD

Being A Colorful Account Of One Of America's Most Colorful Characters

(Following is the fifth chapter of "The Life of Tex Rickard," written by George Kirksey of the United Press staff. Additional chapters will follow daily.—Editor.)

By GEORGE KIRKSEY

(Copyright, 1929 By United Press)

Tex Rickard made a dramatic re-entry into the fight game in 1910, four years after he had astounded the boxing world by successfully staging his first fight between Joe Gans and Battling Nelson in the little desert mining town of Goldfield, Nev.

During the intervening years Rickard devoted his time to mining speculation. He was employed by a syndicate to buy mining claims from individuals who were unable to meet their mortgages when, late in 1909, he was summoned to Duluth by Thomas F. Cole, copper king on a business proposition involving holdings in which they were interested.

The entire country at this time was excited about the possibility of James J. Jeffries, the retired undefeated heavyweight champion, returning to the ring in an effort to recapture the title for the white race from Jack Johnson, negro titleholder.

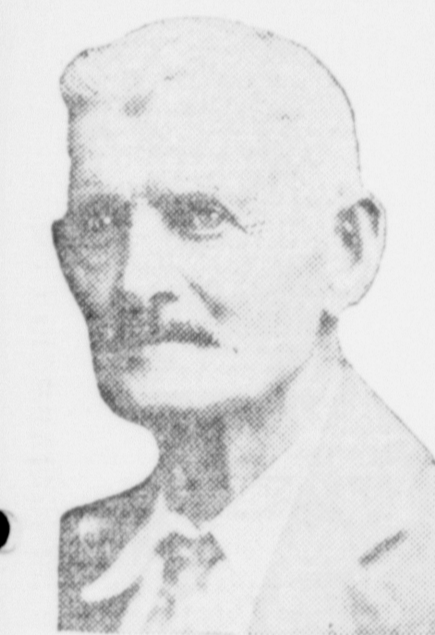

After they had completed their business transactions Cole said: "Why don't you go after the Johnson-Jeffries match, Tex?"

Every life promoter in the country was bidding for the bout and Rickard explained that he wasn't

STOMACH TROUBLE BANISHED BY USE OF NEW KONJOLA

Forced To Live On Diet For Years; Now States That Every Ugly Symptom Is Ugly

Thousands of men and women in Xenia have been relieved of many of the worst forms of stomach, liver, kidney and bowel miseries through the use of this celebrated new Konjola medicine, and thousands of others in this city are still suffering from these ailments but every day more and more of these same sufferers are turning to Konjola for relief. Hundreds of statements have been published, many from this city in which they tell how Konjola restored them to a new state of health. Just a few days ago, Mr. R. H. King, 346 Chestnut Street, Xenia, made the following statement to the Gallaher Drug Store, Xenia:

"I know that Konjola has real merit because this medicine has restored my health after everything else failed to give me any relief," said Mr. King, "and for that reason, I think that others should know about it so that they too, may have the means for gaining the same relief that I did."

"For the past five years I suffered untold miseries from a disordered stomach and during all that time I never found a medicine that would give me a minute's relief. A year ago last October I was forced to give up my work and remain at home. I steadily lost weight and strength until I was a mere shell of my former self. After every meal I would bloat something terrible from the quantities of gas that formed. Sometimes it was very hard for me to get my breath. I had to stop eating all kinds of solid foods because they absolutely refused to digest, but would always sour on my stomach and cause that 'floating' so I ate nothing but broth and soup and very little of either of these two. My nerves could not stand up under the strain and caused me to spend many sleepless nights. I really did not know what to do for myself and thought that I would go through the rest of my life in this condition."

"But now I know that Konjola is a medicine that will surely end stomach trouble because I have completed a treatment and there is not a trace of a single symptom remaining. I am so thankful for the relief it has given me that I will always have the highest praise and recommendation for this remedy. Soon after I started on the treatment I noticed that my stomach did not cause such intense misery and of course, I wouldn't think of missing a dose. Now I want to tell everyone that I can eat whatever is placed before me without suffering the least bit afterward. The gas bloating is a thing of the past. I am steadily gaining in weight and strength and feel just like a different person. Since the gas does not form I never have any trouble breathing. It is really a pleasure to sit down to a meal because I know the food will digest perfectly. Since the stomach trouble is ended my nerves have stopped bothering me and I so enjoy sound and refreshing sleep every night. That is my reason for recommending this medicine and I shall continue to do so every chance I get."

Konjola is sold in Xenia at the Gallaher Drug Store, 33 E. Main Street, and by all the best druggists throughout this entire section.

"CERTAINLY, WE'RE NOT ENGAGED!"

"BIGGEST" FARM BUREAU MEET PROMISED HERE NEXT TUESDAY

The "biggest and best" annual County Farm Bureau meeting in the history of the organization, is the slogan being used by the program committee in arranging for the all-day agricultural conference next Tuesday, January 22. The meeting will be held in the assembly room of the court house, Xenia, and will begin promptly at 10 a. m.

The organization is fortunate in being able to obtain L. B. Palmer, president of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation as one of the main speakers for that day. Mr. Palmer, who was reared on a farm and is in close touch with agricultural conditions, will be heard with interest by his many Greene County friends.

L. D. Kingsbury of the Eastern States Co., who also is scheduled as speaker on the afternoon's program, is in close touch with co-operative livestock marketing, and will bring some interesting facts to his hearers.

Although Mr. Kingsbury has not previously appeared before Greene County audiences, he will prove a most interesting speaker. It is said, Mr. Kingsbury has been with this movement since its organization and is well acquainted with the co-operative marketing plan.

Reports showing the growth of the affiliated organizations of the Farm Bureau will also feature the day's program, and election of directors at large will be held.

The Greene County Orchestra under the direction of W. R. Sayre, will have a prominent place on the program.

Farmers from every part of Greene and surrounding counties are expected to attend this annual agricultural event.

WIDOW FOLLOWS HUSBAND IN DEATH

Eleven days after the death of her husband of pneumonia, Mrs. Arthur J. Leen, widow of a prominent Dayton attorney, died at St. Elizabeth's Hospital Tuesday at 4:45 a. m. of the same disease. She was in ill health, and grief over the death of her husband placed her in a weakened condition which made her an easy victim. She is survived by four children, her mother, two sisters and two brothers. Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

ARMOUR SECOND TO SMITH IN GOLF OPEN

RIVIERA COUNTRY CLUB, Los Angeles, Calif., Jan. 15.—Tommy Armour, of Washington, D. C., came in one stroke ahead of Leo Diegel of Agua Caliente to win second money in the final play of the Los Angeles $10,000 open golf tournament here yesterday.

Armour's card of 291 for 72 holes earned him $1,750.

Macdonald Smith finished Sunday and clinched first money with 285, winning the championship for the second consecutive year. Darkness forced Armour and ten other leaders to quit play on the last two holes.

Armour would have had 289 had he shot par golf on the last hole, but his ball landed in a tree trench, and he was forced to lift out with a one-stroke penalty. He took seven for the par four hole.

Diegel, with a final card of 292, took third money of $875, edging in ahead of Horton Smith, of Joplin, Mo., who received $600.

Walter Hagen was a disappointment to his followers, finishing with a 306, which tied for 15th place and took $100.

U. S. NAVY ACQUIRES TWO HUGE AMPHIBIAN PLANES

These two planes, lined up for a trial flight at Mitchell Field, L. I., are the newest additions to the navy's air force. They are Sikorsky amphibians, costing $60,000 each, and are capable of carrying 12 passengers. One is to be stationed at Washington and the other at San Diego, Cal.

Divorces Knight for Prince

The divorce that Paris mill granted Lady Paul Dukes (above), daughter of Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt and former wife of Under Secretary of the Treasury Ogden Mills, is said to pave the way for her marriage to Prince Charles Murat, son of head of Bonapartist party in France and descendant of the illustrious Corsican.

Last Scenes of Rickard Drama

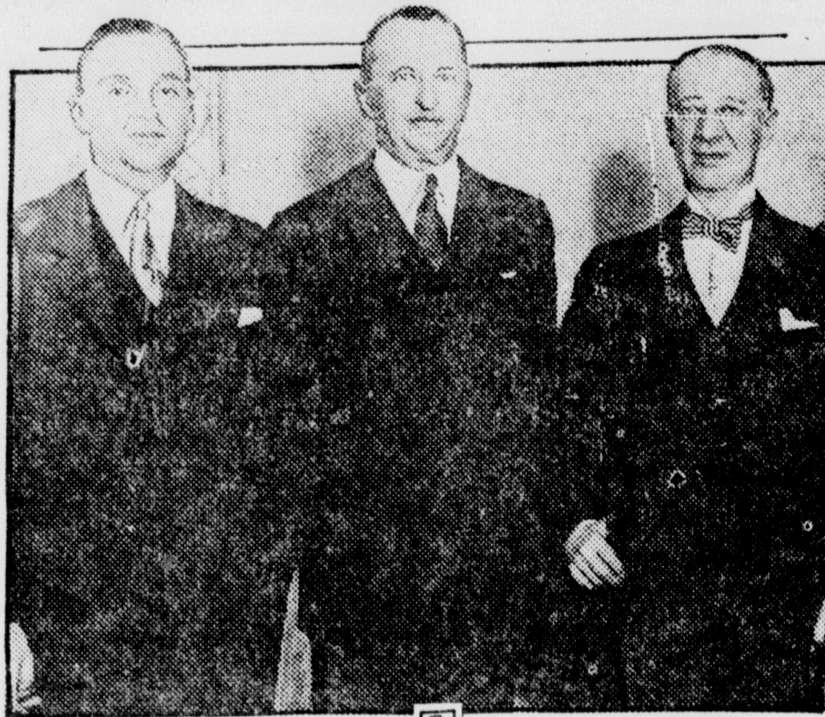

Far from the crowds he loved—the roaring cattle bivouacs, the boiling border towns, the grinding trails, the thudding of soggy boxing gloves and all the clamor of life as lived by the genius promoter—Tex Rickard, great showman, was laid to rest. The photo at top shows a portion of the milling throng at Fort-ninth street and Broadway as it closed in behind the funeral cortege. Below, l. to r., a view of the Rickard family plot in Woodlawn Cemetery; the bugler who blew taps over vault, and Billy Gibson and Jack Sharkey, who attended the funeral.

MOTHERS OF LOST "DALLAS SPIRIT" FLYERS MEET

Two mothers met recently in Oakland, Cal., to see homage paid to their sons, but the occasion was not a joyous one, for they are the mothers of Capt. Bill Erwin and his navigator, Alvin Eichwaldt, who sank into the Pacific during a futile attempt to rescue the lost Dole flyers who had set out for Hawaii. Mrs. Erwin was asked to take part in the dedication of an American Legion post bearing her son's name, and Mrs. Eichwaldt to assist at the formal opening of a memorial park set aside in honor of her son. Above, left, Capt. Erwin; the ill-fated "Dallas Spirit," which carried the flyers to their graves; the two mothers at Oakland airport, with Guy M. Turner, airport superintendent, and Eichwaldt, as he kissed his mother goodbye before taking off.

SMITH GOES BACK TO WORK AGAIN

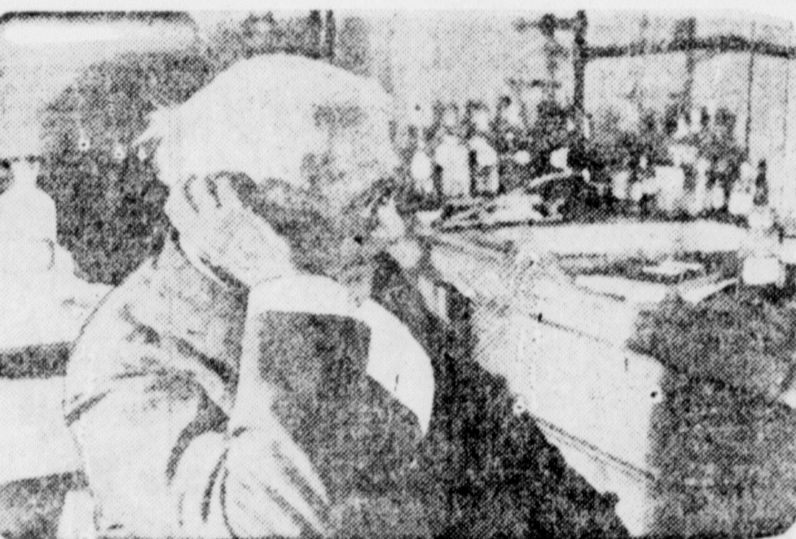

Accepting his first private position since leaving the state house, former Governor Alfred E. Smith becomes a director of the Beekman Street hospital in New York. Photo shows Marshall Field, chairman of the hospital's $150,000 fund drive; Charles H. Sablin, treasurer, and Smith.

NORTHCOTT CONTINUES TO SMILE

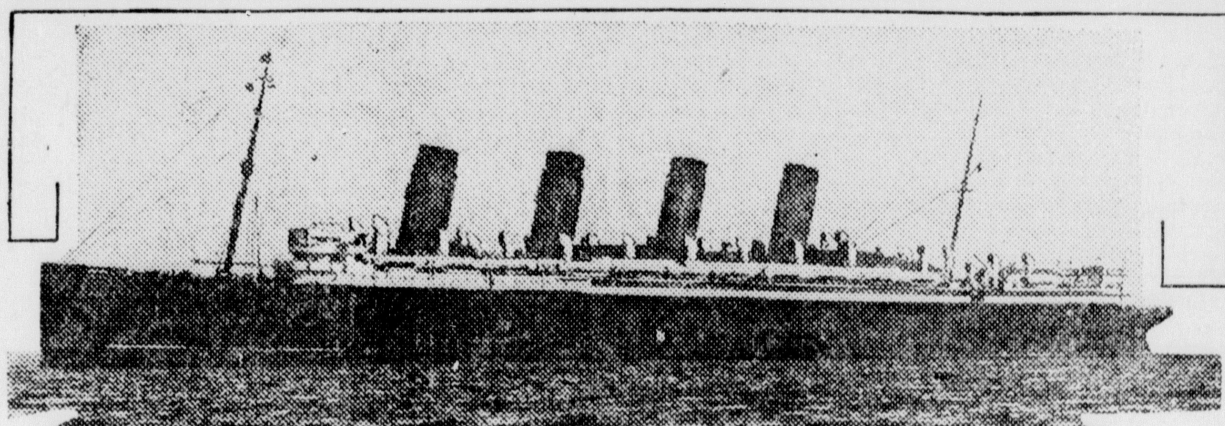

Although on trial for the death of several children on an "alleged murder farm," near Wineville, Cal., Gordon Stewart Northcott still retains his smile. Above, he is grinning as deputies take him from the courtroom, in Los Angeles, to his cell. His mother has been sentenced to life imprisonment for her part in the crime. Inset is of Judge G. R. Freeman, who has replaced Judge O. K. Morton, as trial judge, after complaints of prejudice by Northcott's attorneys. Judge Morton denied prejudice.

Thomas A. Edison in "Rubber"

Though he is approaching his eighty-second birthday, Thomas A. Edison continues to work on a problem of vast importance to the nation. He seeks to make it possible for the United States to produce emergency, or war-time, supplies of rubber. Beats Quinine For Colds

RELIEF IN 30 MINUTES

Quinine causes roaring head, pimples, nausea. And it ISN'T the best treatment for colds or grippe. If you want to lose that aching, dragging feeling in a hurry, if you want your cold to fade overnight, try Laxa-Pirin. It contains aspirin, laxatives and other valuable elements. No quinine. Thousands now use it. Pleasant, safe, and there is positively nothing like it for quick results. Just as wonderful for headache, neuralgia, lumbago, and general pains. Insist on genuine Laxa-Pirin. Compared with 1918, this epidemic, so far, is mild and yet, in spite of vastly increased capacity, the Vicks Laboratories are once more operating night and day to meet the emergency demand for more and more Vicks VapoRub. Over 375,000 jars are now being produced daily.

approved method of using Vicks for FLU

1. AS A PREVENTIVE

Several times a day, insert Vicks up the nostrils. Also melt a little night and morning in a bowl of boiling water and inhale the steaming medicated vapors. This helps to ward off germ-infection.

2. IF A COLD STARTS

If possible, go home and go to bed. Take a laxative and a hot lemonade. Apply hot, wet towels over throat and chest until the skin is thoroughly reddened. Then rub vigorously with Vicks. Spread on thickly and cover with warm flannel. Leave the bed-covering loose, so that the vapors, released by the body warmth, may be freely inhaled. At the same time, Vicks acts through the skin like a poultice.

Repeat this treatment every four hours, eat lightly, and stay in bed until the cold is broken. Complete rest helps the body throw off the cold more quickly.

3. AFTER A FLU ATTACK

Physicians advise that the chief danger in this epidemic is after influenza. Then, more than ever, colds, attacking the weakened system, may lead to bronchitis, sinus-trouble or pneumonia. This is especially true of children or old folk.

Meet even the slightest cold as a danger signal. Vicks is especially valuable here, because it is applied externally, and so can be used freely, as often as needed, without upsetting delicate digestions, as too much "dosing" is so apt to do.

Policyholders Pay $80,000,000 Special Taxes

You Share in This Bill

THE users of insurance in the United States are indirectly but actually burdened with a vast sum—approximately $80,000,000.00 annually—by taxes additional to the regular taxes paid by insurance in common with other lines of industry. This money is a burden upon the premium of the policyholder, even though it is collected from the insurer.

The original purpose of these additional taxes upon insurance was to maintain state supervision of the business, but such supervision uses but four cents of each dollar, and the balance—about $77,000,000.00—is an additional burden upon you, Mr. Policyholder, that goes into the general state treasuries.

The Chamber of Commerce of the United States has adopted the following resolution:

"... Special State Taxes now levied on Policy holders through insurance companies should not be considered as a source of general revenue, but should be reduced to the total in each state which will adequately support such state's departmental supervision..."

The Stock Fire Insurance Companies (which transact by far the greater portion of the fire insurance business of the country) want you to realize this condition and its effect upon the cost of your fire insurance.

approved method of using Vicks for FLU

1. AS A PREVENTIVE

Several times a day, insert Vicks up the nostrils. Also melt a little night and morning in a bowl of boiling water and inhale the steaming medicated vapors. This helps to ward off germ-infection.

2. IF A COLD STARTS

If possible, go home and go to bed. Take a laxative and a hot lemonade. Apply hot, wet towels over throat and chest until the skin is thoroughly reddened. Then rub vigorously with Vicks. Spread on thickly and cover with warm flannel. Leave the bed-covering loose, so that the vapors, released by the body warmth, may be freely inhaled. At the same time, Vicks acts through the skin like a poultice.

Repeat this treatment every four hours, eat lightly, and stay in bed until the cold is broken. Complete rest helps the body throw off the cold more quickly.

3. AFTER A FLU ATTACK

Physicians advise that the chief danger in this epidemic is after influenza. Then, more than ever, colds, attacking the weakened system, may lead to bronchitis, sinus-trouble or pneumonia. This is especially true of children or old folks.

Used even the slightest cold as a danger signal. Vicks is especially valuable here, because it is applied externally, and so can be used freely, as often as needed, without upsetting delicate digestions, as too much "dosing" is so apt to do.

Policyholders Pay

$80,000,000

Special Taxes

You Share in This Bill

THE users of insurance in the United States are indirectly but actually burdened with a vast sum—approximately $80,000,000.00 annually—by taxes additional to the regular taxes paid by insurance in common with other lines of industry. This money is a burden upon the premium of the policyholder, even though it is collected from the insurer.

The original purpose of these additional taxes upon insurance was to maintain state supervision of the business, but such supervision uses but four cents of each dollar, and the balance—about $77,000,000.00—is an additional burden upon you, Mr. Policyholder, that goes into the general state treasuries.

The Chamber of Commerce of the United States has adopted the following resolution:

"... Special State Taxes now levied on Policy holders through insurance companies should not be considered as a source of general revenue, but should be reduced to the total in each state which will adequately support such state's departmental supervision"

The Stock Fire Insurance Companies (which transact by far the greater portion of the fire insurance business of the country) want you to realize this condition and its effect upon the cost of your fire insurance.

READ THIS FIRST:

Poverty and failure shadowed the little Colonial house which Byrd Browning had just bought, hoping that it would revive Larry's love for her and his interest in a home and children. For Byrd Browning, brought up in a small town, was trying to adapt herself to her fast-moving, magnetic, young husband, but she soon discovered that Jack Duncan, his business associate, was plunging him into debt instead of making him rich as he promised. Larry's friends were lively and spendthrift, and Larry, too, was spending his entire income, even the large sums he was continually borrowing from Mr. Hamilton, Byrd's father, on useless extravagance and on India Campbell, a former sweetheart of Larry's.

Byrd purchased back not only Larry's interest in the unsound real estate companies, but also Jack's interest in the Builders' Supply company, making Larry entirely independent of him. Having placed her mother on the train for Jacksonville, Byrd discovered India and Larry, who was supposed to be out of town, getting into a taxi together. Completely crushed, Byrd returned home, gathered Larry's belongings together, and placed them in the vestibule. Beside them she sat and waited. With his old excuses, Larry attempted to explain away his disbehavior, but this time Byrd was unmoved and broken. Larry left the house.

Mr. Polk, in the bank, having arranged to sell the house, gave her a position as his private secretary. While preparing to vacate the house, Pat, her young sister, who had been living with them, returned from her honeymoon.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XLIX

"There's nothing left for me of days that used to be I live in memory among my souvenirs."

Byrd remembered this song as a favorite of Larry's. It had been one of his "bathroom" repertoire, as he had jokingly called them.

She never realized then what a poignant meaning the words would have for her some day.

She was sitting on the attic floor, going through the trunks that contained her winter clothes, old notebooks and an accumulation of papers and letters.

She wondered now that she could ever have been interested in geometry, physics and Latin.

Then she started reading the love letters from Paul long forgotten. She came upon Larry's letters, tied with a bright pink ribbon.

"Mandy," she called down the stairs. "Bring up a waste-basket."

Mandy came puffing up and Byrd directed her to throw all the letters and notebooks into the basket and carry it down to the waste paper bag.

"Honey," said Mandy, eyeing dubiously the little package of letters tied with ordinary string and then the one tied with pink ribbon. "Oh, that's 'bring you' bad luck 'n' 'yo' throw 'yo' lub letters away. 'Yo' kin throw 'yo' no-ack letters away but 'yo' hav' bad luck all 'yo' life for surely certain 'yo' throw away 'yo' true lub letters."

"Luck has nothing to do with my life," said Byrd solemnly, "some people were born unlucky and stay that way."

Mandy started to object again. "Take them down Mandy and don't argue," said Byrd sharply.

With an injured look Mandy trudged away with the basket, but when she got to the basement she saw that the little bundle tied with a pink ribbon and stowed it away in her ample apron pocket.

At the end of the week, everything had been disposed of except the largest pieces of furniture that she and Mr. Polk had decided might sell with the house.

On Saturday, Byrd stood on the lawn under the elm watching her precious possessions go back to the warehouse. Her eyes filled with unshed tears as the van turned the corner and she kept staring for fully five minutes as if some mirage still held her spell-bound.

The leaves of the elm seemed to sway as to a funeral dirge.

The future looked bleak and cheerless.

Mandy came and stood at her side and her eyes were suspiciously moist.

"Now, Mandy, it's no use you're carrying on so," said Byrd severely. "Just as if there hadn't been lots of places where you stayed less than three weeks."

"Yes, yes, Miss Browning and one place I stayed only one night," said Mandy, and packed her trunk and had it sent over to the room which she had rented by the week from a private family living on East 9th Street.

On Sunday she had taken her suitcase and said goodby to Mandy. "I'm going to get my room fixed up this afternoon," she told Mandy, "for I start working at the bank tomorrow morning. And I'm going to stay there tonight so I can get used to sleeping in a strange house and in a strange bed."

Mandy saw her grit her little white teeth.

"Tiny, now didn't I tell you to control yourself?"

After the house is sold, I'll sell the car too," she said, "but I'll run over tomorrow after work. You've got to keep me cheered up!" she looked into Mandy's eyes, again swimming with thick tears.

After Byrd had left, Mandy sat on the back steps, her mahogany features still daubed and wet. The ordeal of finding another place was almost too much for her.

She heard him, long steps coming around the house.

"Larry's a messy, if it ain't Mister Browning!" she exclaimed jumping to her feet. "Miss Browning's left her hat hour ago to go to her rooming house."

Larry frowned.

"Have you her address?" he asked her.

"Larry's a messy, if she ain't gone away and forgot to give it to me," Mandy said, dumbfoundedly.

"Larry, indifferently, 'I came to get the rest of my things.'"

"They're inside!" Mandy pointed, sitting down again and turning a very cold shoulder towards Larry.

"I declare to goodness of I ever see such a obstinate-minded man," she said out loud, knowing that Larry was within earshot.

Larry carried the boxes and other things out to the waiting taxi.

Mandy came to the front door as he was leaving.

"Any message, huh?" she asked, wrathfully.

"No, Mandy," his voice was strange. He hesitated a moment, as if he was going to say something. Then went out of the door without a word.

The next day Mandy showed a nice-looking young couple with two children through the house. She was torn between her anxiety to help Byrd sell the house and a reluctance to give it up.

Byrd appeared about seven o'clock that night.

"Mandy, oh Mandy," she shouted, before she had brought the car to a stop in the driveway, "you're going to stay. You don't have to pack your clothes and move out. Those people have taken the house and asked Mr. Polk if you could be persuaded to stay as their maid. They're from out of town."

Byrd climbed out of the car and pronounced about on the lawn.

"Shut 'yo' face!" was all that Mandy could say. "You 'sho' be playing a joke on Mandy," she man- aged to say a little later, completely mystified.

"This is what happened. They stopped at Mr. Polk's office this afternoon after they had seen the house and wanted the furniture and wanted you too."

Byrd's eyes shone with excitement.

"Then the house ain't sold?" asked Mandy.

"Of course it's sold," said Byrd. "And are you so glad of that, honey?" asked Mandy, still mystified.

"Mandy, you don't understand. I'm glad because some nice people have taken it who will treat my things gently. I'll always think of this as my house, no matter who's living in it, and if you're here, everything will be taken care of."

"Bless the Lord!" was all Mandy could say, but her eyes closed and her lips moved as if in prayer.

Fred Oberman's big, maroon-colored car with a chauffeur in livery, stopped in front of the house.

Something shivered inside of Byrd. She would have to tell them all the circumstances of the separation, but they were upon her before she could decide which way to run.

"Hello, Early-Bird," sang out Fred, as they came up the walk, but his big voice lacked the boisterous, hearty quality that his friends, over, they want to be left alone, and I say the wife who can love and worried and Tiny's highly-rouged face was moving as if she were going to cry.

Tiny suddenly threw her arms around Byrd and burst into tears.

"Tiny," shouted Fred, excitedly, "now didn't I tell you to control yourself! My God, worse than a baby!"

Byrd looked from one to the other, abashed.

Then she understood. They knew! And they suffered as keenly as if it had happened to themselves. She wondered that she had ever doubted their loyalty and genuineness.

"Come on, let's go into the house," she said hurriedly. "The neighbors don't know yet."

"Larry came and told us everything," said Fred, blowing his large, red nose violently with a large handkerchief. "Pretty badly broken up, too, he is, but he says he had it coming to him."

Byrd held up her hand quickly. "If you don't mind, Fred, we'll not talk about it. What's done can't be undone," she looked at them appealingly, her pansy-like eyes deep and brooding. "It took me a long time to make up my mind, and now that I have, wild horses won't change it."

Fred nodded.

"I won't ever question your judgment, little Byrd," he said, softly. And blew his nose again.

He took off his coat, for the evening was very warm. His collar was wilted, and large areas of perspiration widened at the armpits.

He walked out into the back yard to get a breath of air.

"He's all broken up over it," and Tiny dabbed a futile piece of gauze, which was really a handkerchief, at her mascaraed eyes, streaking her cheeks and nose with black.

"Say, littles, I wish you had told me how things were going with you and Larry," said Tiny, after a long silence. "I often think an outsider can suggest a remedy no one else can."

"I was patient with Larry for months. I was so green when I married that I didn't raze him like a person would have who was more suspicious. I couldn't believe that he was seeing India all the time. I couldn't believe that he wouldn't stop gambling and drinking too much and spending his money reck- lessly. I couldn't believe that he didn't see the danger of handling unreliable stocks. I did scold him, but not half as much as he deserved. And he just couldn't see himself as he really was. He thought I was picking at him all the time without cause, exaggerating things because, as he said, I was only a little thing."

Tiny nodded sympathetically.

There was another silence.

"Tiny," asked Byrd, curiously, "you seem always to know just how to manage Fred. How do you do it?"

Tiny gave a shrill little laugh, but she was very much flattered.

"I guess the same scheme would work with all of them. If we only had the sense to know it," she asserted, raptly. Then her eyes had that fleeting, unhappy look.

"Maybe I make a fuss over Fred because I've never had a baby and I work it off on him," she said, soberly. "He doesn't know it, though, the great, big billy-baby!"

"Byrd, darling," she continued, "I'm awfully dumb about most things. I can't do a thing except house- keeping, and I don't know much about that! But I know that all men want to be loved and fussed over, and they eat it up the more you give 'em. If you want your husband to be sweet to you, you got to be sweet to him first and foremost and all the time. It's hard, sometimes when they're cross and fault-finding and think the king can do no wrong. But take it from me, more than wanting to be fussed over, they want to be left alone, and I say the wife who can love her husband, pet him, and leave him alone, is the woman who's always going to be happy, and always have her hubby eatin' out of her hand."

Fred tried to persuade Byrd to come and live with them, but she told him she was now on her own, and was going to stick it out. She had an interesting job and was going to make it her profession.

"Little Byrd a business woman?" laughed Fred, teasingly. "The chief business of all the tellers will be keeping their eyes on you. Why, I bet—"

Tiny's eyes silenced him.

After they had gone, Byrd said good-bye to Mandy and started her car, turning it toward town and her rooming house.

Tiny's words lay heavy on her mind.

The Theater

Making a lot of money and getting credit for being smart a lot of times is just the result of making a wild guess, gambling on the outcome, having the faith to stick with it and then coming through to success.

At least that's the way it looks concerning the Warner Brothers, who weren't so much-a-much in the cinema world until they made this Vitaphone thing go. And they got about the last chance at it, at that.

It seems that when the American Telephone and Telegraph folks developed the sound picture system called Vitaphone, they called in the biggest lads in the movie industry to show 'em its possibilities. Think any of them would fall for it? Not on your dollar watch. These wise men of the celluloid turned the proposition flat and some of them even added a derisive laugh. That made too A. T. and T. folks pretty mad and when the Warners came, saw and listened and reckoned they'd take a chance, the owners felt so kindly toward them that they made them a generous financial proposition.

Well, the story goes that the Warners installed the Vitaphone in their Eastern theaters, using the mediocre shots that were available at the time, and the thing went over big. Warner Bros. stock jumped on the market from eight to something like eighty.

The Warners thought they'd made a ten-strike so they put the machines in St. Louis and other middle-western towns, but the idea didn't go over. It got so a Vitaphone sign was just the same as a quarantine sign in front of a mid-west theater and Warner stock dropped back to nine.

Then along came Al Jolson, little Davy Lee and the "Singing Fool". It's hard to tell whether Al, the kid or the song numbers made it such a big hit, but it employed unprecedented popularity and with it went up the Vitaphone. Now Warner stock is 194 and wouldn't you have liked to have had a few hundred riding on that jump?

A rumor has been pretty widely circulated through out the country that President Calvin Coolidge is about to sternly stem the Green Mountains of his native state and has as much sense of humor as a cauliflower. This rumor is blasted with the story now going around that the President discovered a buzzer in the White House and learned it was to summon aid to that of fire. It is reported that Coolidge kept the guards busy several days by punching the buzzer and hiding before they found out who was responsible.

What we started out to tell, however, was how he contributed a bit of unconscious humor to a Fox news reel recently shown at the Bijou Theater. The picture showed the President in ten-gallon Western hat and hunting clothes on the Coffin estate of Sapelo Island, where he was vacationing.

The President marched forward in front of the camera, into the underbrush and fired one shot at an unseen target. He then turned and marched off calmly and was followed by two game-bearers carrying a whole string of "whozis".

REPEATS CAMPAIGN PLEDGES IN SPEECH TO JOINT SESSION

Increased tax on foreign insurance companies, enacted by the eighty-seventh general assembly. The tax was increased from two and one-half to three per cent and Gov. Cooper recommended that the original figure be restored.

Retaliatory laws in other states work equal or even greater hardships on Ohio insurance companies, so no ultimate good is accomplished, the governor believes. The governor strongly urged the repeal of the Pence public utilities law, terming the existing statute permitting utilities to collect rates under bond before the rates are approved by the public utilities commission, unfair advantage to the utilities.

To cure what were described as the abuses growing out of the law, Governor Cooper recommended: 1. Unqualified repeal. 2. Adoption of measures under which public utilities hearings would be speeded up. 3. Refusal to authorize a rate change until the case has been heard.

The governor suggested the abolition of assessments for state highway construction and maintenance upon owners of contingent property.

"It is manifestly unfair that

Why some children are peevish.

Happy disposition easily recovered.

Some children are liable to get bilious and irritable, just as grown-ups often do. It is easily remedied. Simply give a dose of "California Fig Syrup," and in a few hours the bowels will move, the liver will be relieved and all pent-up bile and sour, constipated waste removed, leaving the system clean and sweet and the child bright and energetic again.

"California Fig Syrup" banishes biliousness and constipation, regulates the bowels and insures pure blood, a clear complexion, joyous spirits, a keen brain, healthy appetite and aids sturdy growth.

To get the genuine California Fig Syrup, endorsed by physicians for 50 years, look for the name "California" on the package. Adv.

farmers or other home owners living upon one of these routes should be assessed any part of the cost of building the highway," he said.

Governor Cooper advocated a more thorough development of county highway systems and urged legislation requiring the densely populated counties—those with tax duplicates of more than $300,000—to aid the state in new construction and widening.

"The appropriation for state highway maintenance should be made in a lump sum," the governor said. "The thirteen separate classifications now in force serve only to confuse the highway problem and involve unnecessary work."

Governor Cooper then endorsed the blue sky bill sponsored by the state bar association and introduced in the senate last week by Senator Paul M. Herbert, of Columbus.

"The securities law now in effect does not meet demands for safeguarding small investors," he said. "Since the enactment of the present law, public has invested in the buying of liberty bond drives, and now needs protection from the sale of 'wildcat' securities."

The governor also favored the bar association's proposals for amending the general corporations act and advocated adoption of a measure for the simplification of court proceedings.

While the governor did not specifically mention the habitual criminal bill, it was intimated that it receives his approval. This bill, introduced last week, would result in life sentences for criminals convicted of four felonies.

Cooper strongly favored permanent registration for elections. He said he believes a law embodying this would eliminate fraud in local state and national elections.

The construction of a new state office building and the creation of a department of conservation, both advocated by the joint legislative committee on economy, received the new executive's endorsement.

In conclusion Governor Cooper asked for party harmony in legislative affairs and pledged his support to the party program.

MORGAN SPEAKING ON EASTERN TRIP

Arthur E. Morgan, president of Antioch College, left Yellow Springs Saturday on a speaking engagement trip through New York and other eastern states.

In Poughkeepsie, N. Y., President Morgan will address the American Association of University Women on the subject, "Indoctrination." Together with Mrs. O. Imman, head of the publicity bureau of the college, he will also attend an Antioch dinner to be given in New York City.

Robert J. F. Swartzenbach, an Antioch College trustee and New York City consul from Switzerland, has invited Mr. Morgan to attend the annual Swiss dinner January 17.

SERVES TERM HERE

John Wesley Gibson, Xenia, who drew a fifteen-day jail sentence imposed by Federal Judge Benson W. Hough at Columbus Saturday on a charge of altering a war compensation certificate, will serve out the sentence in the Greene County Jail. The federal prisoner was delivered to Sheriff Ohmer Tate Saturday night.

TAKE COOPER TO STATE PEN

Gilbert Cooper, 49, Cedarville laborer, convicted slayer of Caleb Hitchcock, 23, near Cedarville last November 24, who faces life imprisonment in expiration of the crime, was scheduled to be taken to Ohio State Penitentiary Tuesday afternoon by Sheriff Ohmer Tate to begin his sentence. The trip was to be made by motor.

Attorney F. L. Johnson, defense counsel, announced Monday that Cooper's conviction for first degree murder will be appealed to the Court of Appeals as soon as possible on the grounds the verdict was excessive. The appeal will be taken directly to the appellate court, he said.

The jury which found Cooper guilty of first degree murder recommended mercy and the convicted man may therefore look forward to life imprisonment without expectation of pardon except by executive clemency unless his appeal is successful.

SENTENCED TO JAIL

Charged with petit larceny for the theft of a pair of spectacles valued at $14, owned by Otis Pramer, from the Pennsylvania Railroad target house, Clarence Mickle, 18, home-at-large, was fined $25 and costs and sentenced to ten days in the County Jail by Probate Judge S. C. Wright Monday. Mickle pleaded guilty.

The youth was arrested at 3 a. m. Sunday and locked up at Police Headquarters by Fred O. Lienance, railroad detective.

Because of the temporary flow of money into speculative channels 1928 was not a year favorable to the growth of Business Associations, but conditions had little or no effect on their earning power, and this Association carried into its Safety Funds a greater amount of surplus earnings than ever before.

More important than this is the fact that while, because of prevailing conditions, forced collections were more numerous than usual in 1928, this Association put into its Safety Funds more than Three Dollars for every dollar taken out of them, and increased their total more than $50,000 within the year, after all deductions.

This, with the fact that we have not yet had any accumulation of real estate on our hands, shows that our loans have been carefully placed, and are dependable under changing conditions. REPEATS CAMPAIGN PLEDGES IN SPEECH TO JOINT SESSION

Increased tax on foreign insurance companies, enacted by the eighty-seventh general assembly. The tax was increased from two and one-half to three per cent and Gov. Cooper recommended that the original figure be restored.

Retaliatory laws in other states work equal or even greater hardships on Ohio insurance companies, so no ultimate good is accomplished, the governor believes. The governor strongly urged the repeal of the Pence public utilities law, terminating the existing statute permitting utilities to collect rates under bond before the rates are approved by the public utilities commission, unfair advantage to the utilities.

To cure what were described as the abuses growing out of the law, Governor Cooper recommended: 1. Unqualified repeal. 2. Adoption of measures under which public utilities hearings would be speeded up. 3. Refusal to authorize a rate change until the case has been heard.

The governor suggested the abolition of assessments for state highway construction and maintenance upon owners of contingent property.

"It is manifestly unfair that

Why some children are peevish.

Happy disposition easily recovered.

Some children are liable to get bilious and irritable, just as grown-ups often do. It is easily remedied. Simply give a dose of "California Fig Syrup," and in a few hours the bowels will move, the liver will be relieved and all pent-up bile and sour, constipated waste removed, leaving the system clean and sweet and the child bright and energetic again.

"California Fig Syrup" banishes biliousness and constipation, regulates the bowels and insures pure blood, a clear complexion, joyous spirits, a keen brain, healthy appetite and aids sturdy growth. farmers or other home owners living upon one of these routes should be assessed any part of the cost of building the highway," he said.

Governor Cooper advocated a more thorough development of county highway systems and urged legislation requiring the densely populated counties—those with tax duplicates of more than $300,000—to aid the state in new construction and widening.

"The appropriation for state highway maintenance should be made in a lump sum," the governor said. "The thirteen separate classifications now in force serve only to confuse the highway problem and involve unnecessary work."

Governor Cooper then endorsed the blue sky bill sponsored by the state bar association and introduced in the senate last week by Senator Paul M. Herbert, of Columbus.

The securities law now in effect does not meet demands for safeguarding small investors," he said. "Since the enactment of the present law, before the World War, the buying public has invested in bonds to a greater extent through the impetus of liberty bond drives, and now needs protection from the sale of 'wildcat' securities."

The governor also favored the bar association's proposals for amending the general corporations act and advocated adoption of a measure for the simplification of court proceedings.

While the governor did not specifically mention the habitual criminal bill, it was intimated that it receives his approval. This bill, introduced last week, would result in life sentences for criminals convicted of four felonies.

Cooper strongly favored permanent registration for elections. He said he believes a law embodying this would eliminate fraud in local state and national elections.

The construction of a new state office building and the creation of a department of conservation, both advocated by the joint legislative committee on economy, received the new executive's endorsement.

In conclusion Governor Cooper asked for party harmony in legislative affairs and pledged his support to the party program.

MORGAN SPEAKING ON EASTERN TRIP

Arthur E. Morgan, president of Antioch College, left Yellow Springs Saturday on a speaking engagement trip through New York and other eastern states.

In Poughkeepsie, N. Y., President Morgan will address the American Association of University Women on the subject, "Indoctrination." Together with Mrs. O. Inman, head of the publicity bureau of the college, he will also attend an Antioch dinner to be given in New York City.

Robert J. F. Swartzenbach, an Antioch College trustee and New York City consul from Switzerland, has invited Mr. Morgan to attend the annual Swiss dinner January 17.

SERVES TERM HERE

John Wesley Gibson, Xenia, who drew a fifteen-day jail sentence imposed by Federal Judge Benson W. Hough at Columbus Saturday on a charge of altering a war compensation certificate, will serve out the sentence in the Greene County Jail. The federal prisoner was delivered to Sheriff Ohmer Tate Saturday night.

TAKE COOPER TO STATE PEN

Gilbert Cooper, 49, Cedarville laborer, convicted slayer of Caleb Hitchcock, 23, near Cedarville last November 24, who faces life imprisonment in expiration of the crime, was scheduled to be taken to Ohio State Penitentiary Tuesday afternoon by Sheriff Ohmer Tate to begin his sentence. The trip was to be made by motor.

Attorney F. L. Johnson, defense counsel, announced Monday that Cooper's conviction for first degree murder will be appealed to the Court of Appeals as soon as possible on the grounds the verdict was excessive. The appeal will be taken directly to the appellate court, he said.

The jury which found Cooper guilty of first degree murder recommended mercy and the convicted man may therefore look forward to life imprisonment without expectation of pardon except by executive clemency unless his appeal is successful.

SENTENCED TO JAIL

Charged with petit larceny for the theft of a pair of spectacles valued at $14, owned by Otis Pramer, from the Pennsylvania Railroad target house, Clarence Mickle, 18, home-at-large, was fined $25 and costs and sentenced to ten days in the County Jail by Probate Judge S. C. Wright Monday. Mickle pleaded guilty.

The youth was arrested at 3 a. m. Sunday and locked up at Police Headquarters by Fred O. Lienance, railroad detective.

Because of the temporary flow of money into speculative channels 1928 was not a year favorable to the growth of Business Associations, but conditions had little or no effect on their earning power, and this Association carried into its Safety Funds a greater amount of surplus earnings than ever before.

More important than this is the fact that while, because of prevailing conditions, forced collections were more numerous than usual in 1928, this Association put into its Safety Funds more than Three Dollars for every dollar taken out of them, and increased their total more than $50,000 within the year, after all deductions.

This, with the fact that we have not yet had any accumulation of real estate on our hands, shows that our loans have been carefully placed, and are dependable under changing conditions. Let us send you a Booklet of Information and tell you why we believe that our 6 per cent and Safety should receive your favorable consideration.
